Senate adds housing to tax credit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Friday night to make additional new housing available for sale under the special $2,000 tax credit program for homebuyers.

The proposed extension would allow persons who buy new homes which were under construction before Thursday to be eligible for a tax credit of 5 per cent of the cost of the house, up to a maximum of $2,000. A tax credit is an amount subtracted from taxes owed.

The provision would extend a tax feature enacted in the tax rebate law President Ford signed March 29. That law offered a tax credit to purchasers of new homes under construction before March 26, 1975.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., author of the original tax credit for homes, proposed the extension.

He said his original plan — accepted only reluctantly by President Ford — had been responsible for a "tremendous" spurt in the sale of new but unsold homes which were serving as a drag on the market.

"If it's worth doing, it's worth doing a little more of," Long said of his proposal to extend the credit to homes built in the nearly three months between March 26 and June 19.

But it is uncertain whether the administration will accept the extension. It would add more than a quarter of a billion dollars to a budget deficit which is likely to approach $75 billion, more.

Long's proposal would liberalize the plan in one other regard. The original law made the tax credit available only on homes being sold at the lowest price at which they had ever been offered. The extension proposal would make it available on houses whose price had not been raised since Feb. 28.

Many developers reportedly had trouble selling houses under the old deadline because rising construction costs had forced them to raise the original selling price.

The Senate attached the new provisions to an emergency bill which would extend to Dec. 31 a law under which unemployed workers could receive up to 65 weeks of unemployment compensation.

Alleged Castro assassination plotter

Syndicate boss slain in home

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sam "Momo" Giancana, former playboy kingpin of the Chicago crime syndicate who was named recently in allegations of a mob-linked CIA plot to assassinate Fidel Castro, was shot to death Thursday night in his suburban home.

Senate CIA probes wanted Sam's info

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate intelligence committee disclosed Friday that it had tried to contact Sam Giancana, the Chicago underworld figure murdered Thursday, for possible testimony about an alleged administration plot against Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., the committee's vice chairman, told reporters: "We have noted with interest that he was done away with. He had been contacted by some of our staff. The committee had not taken the decision to call on him as a witness."

Tower could shed no light on speculation that Giancana was murdered because of the possibility he might be called to testify before the Senate committee.

Committee staff members,

There was a rush in 1970 as the Shafer administration in Pennsylvania closed out its months of lame duck operation. It was not a gold rush, but a contract rush as the Department of Transportation doled out contracts to engineering firms which had been good party contributors.

The former PennDOT secretary says all contracts were based on merit and were not rewards for political support. Page 3 has the story as John Moore's series on Pennsylvania politics continues with part five.

Ford's in — officially

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's campaign for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination formally began Friday with the registration of a new political committee to raise and spend funds on his behalf.

The temporary chairman of the campaign committee, former White House aide Dean Burch, said Ford had given his supporters to "go right down the middle of the road" and to bend over backwards to run an ethical campaign.

PFC — the new President Ford Committee — will be run by Burch, who also was a political adviser to President Richard M. Nixon, until it is taken over by Army Secretary perhaps fearful mob associates.

The violent death of the 65-year-old, once-dapper Giancana was Chicago's 1,023rd gangland slaying since the Chicago Crime Commission began keeping count in 1919 before Al Capone made "rubout" a part of the language.

The Senate Intelligence Committee disclosed in Washington that its aides had made preliminary contacts with Giancana with the view to taking testimony from him about the alleged Castro assassination scheme.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., committee vice chairman, said the committee had not decided whether to call the gang chieftain as a witness and would not speculate whether Giancana was slain to keep him

Nuclear studies kept in energy research bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, defeating attempts to delay the "fast breeder" nuclear reactor program and to stop nuclear weapons development, Friday approved a $5.8 billion bill for energy research over the next 15 months. The vote was 317 to 9.

The bill would authorize money for the Energy Research and Development Administration for fiscal year beginning July 1 and for the three transition months through Sept. 30, 1976, that mark the new fiscal year system.

Howard "Bo" Callaway, who is leaving the government in July to head the campaign. Former Defense Undersecretary David Packard will be the finance chairman and treasurer.

The committee, operating out of a private office building a short walk from the White House, apparently will go out of existence next August after the Republican National Convention.

Ford has said a number of times he would turn over conduct of any general election campaign to the Republican National Committee rather than using an independent group such as Nixon's ill-starred Committee To Reelect The President.

The murder weapon was missing but six empty .22 caliber cartridges lay near the body. Slugs removed from the body were to be compared to slugs removed from the body of Anthony Battaglia, reputed mobster slain by a small caliber gun April 29 in the driveway of his west suburban home.

Oak Park Police Chief Wilbur Reichert said there was no sign of a forced entry. Cook County state's attorneys made a door-to-door search of the quiet residential neighborhood for anyone who might have seen the killer or killers enter the home.

Statistics encourage investors

By RICHARD HUGHES
UPI Business Writer

The rate of inflation was cut in half, spendable income has increased and orders for manufactured products rose for the second consecutive month, government economic statistics showed Friday.

Investors were encouraged. The Dow Jones industrial index of the New York Stock Exchange, which rose 17.52 points Thursday, made strong gains again Friday.

The White House called the increase of .04 per cent in the consumer price index for May "a continuation of the significant reduction of inflationary pressures."

The increase, which translates into an annual inflationary rate of about 5 per cent, is less

Tourism funding agreed

WASHINGTON — Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-15 announced Friday he has reached an agreement with the White House over the tourism promotion bill which President Ford had previously vetoed.

Rooney said the House will pass a revised bill next week establishing three-year funding levels for the promotion of domestic and international tourism, and the President has agreed to sign it.

The congressman would not provide any details of the compromise, except to say the new bill will seek to avoid duplication by federal domestic tourism promotion of programs currently conducted by states, cities or private businesses.

209 funding zips by House panel

By MARK BROWN

WASHINGTON — Without a single dissenting voice, the House Appropriations Committee Friday approved $4.6 million to acquire land and start building a new Rte. 209. The full House will vote on the measure next week.

The funds include $2.5 million for the fiscal year which begins in 10 days, and another $2.1 million for the three-month transition period when the government shifts to a new fiscal year beginning in October, instead of July.

The Rte. 209 relocation funds are part of a $7.2 billion Public Works Appropriations bill for fiscal year 1976 and the transition period.

Meanwhile, spokesmen for both the Army Corps of Engineers and National Park Service have assured Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, they are gearing up to begin the relocation as soon as possible — assuming the appropriations bill passes the full Congress and is not vetoed by President Ford.

McDade said he is "not aware of any active

Reaction: Delight, caution

STROUDSBURG — Local officials reacted with cautious optimism Friday to news that the House Appropriations Committee unanimously voted to allocate $4.6 million to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to acquire land and start building a new Rte. 209.

Most of the people contacted Friday credited Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, with shaking loose federal funds for the road.

C. Marshall Reese, chairman of the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission, said Friday, "Of course we're delighted with the chance Congress will allocate the money."

"But we're concerned and would like to see some assurance the state will take care of its share and make it (Rte. 209) four lanes instead of two."

Reese said he wanted to make sure the public doesn't feel the relocation of 209 is the answer to all the problems.

"It will compound them unless the other work is done at the same time," Reese said.

The Corps of Engineers will, if Congress passes the bill and President Ford signs it, relocate 23 of the 28 miles of the road. The last five miles where 209 connects with Interstate 80 near East Stroudsburg is not considered part of the federal enclave.

Reese said it is important now to work to insure the completion of the entire 28-mile stretch.

Monroe County Commissioner William Quinn, when informed of the Appropriations Committee's unanimous vote, said, "I think it's wonderful and I knew all the time that McDade could do it."

Quinn said it would be at least four or five years before the road will be completed, but that the funding is a "step forward."

The commissioner thought with the federal funds appropriated there would be a good possibility of the state extending 209 to I-80.

Malpractice insurance hike asked

HARRISBURG (UPI) — A group of medical malpractice insurers has asked state approval for a total $3 million in new rates 315 per cent above increases granted less than six months ago.

Insurance Commissioner William Sheppard said Thursday the proposals had been submitted by Insurance Services Office, an organization representing a number of insurers.

ISO's last malpractice insurance increases approved by the Insurance Department were effective Jan. 1. If approved, the new proposals would push increased limit premiums up more than 400 per cent.

A chart filed by ISO with its proposal showed a cardiac specialist in the five-county Philadelphia area would pay $9,045 instead of $2,579 for basic malpractice coverage and $18,557 a year instead of $4,425 for both basic and increased limit coverage, a top dollar protection program most specialists buy.

The costliest form of malpractice insurance, covering specialists such as obstetricians and gynecologists, would go from a total basic and increased limit total of $5,307 in the greater Philadelphia area to $22,266, a total 319 per cent increase. The top total premium elsewhere in the state would reach $14,084.

'Overzealous agents' blamed

IRS admits spy tactics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service disclosed Friday it has used undercover agents equipped with microphones concealed in tie clasps, Chap Sticks, lunch box tape recorders and body transmitters.

It also revealed it has trained more than 100 undercover men since 1963 and actually deployed more than 20 of them with the deep "cover" of a thoroughly documented false identity.

The disclosures came in two IRS internal audits presented to the House Government Operations subcommittee, an IRS oversight body now holding hearings on the performance of the federal tax collecting agency.

To congressmen wondering what business the IRS had using this type of spying, IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander replied that those acts were committed by overzealous agents in violation of IRS guidelines.

He said all non-accountant investigative work by the agency's 2,700 "special agents" has been suspended until new and tighter guidelines can be issued. They had been dealing in organized crime and narcotics traffic in addition to tax matters.

An internal IRS audit conducted for the period Jan. 1, 1973, to Feb. 25, 1974, revealed that IRS agents were recording telephone conversations without proper authorization and that many "sensitive electronic surveillance devices" had not been turned back to the agency after missions.

"These items included body transmitters, an automatic telephone monitoring device capable of use for a wiretap, briefcase and lunch box tape recorders, room-type microphone bugs, pen desk set with built-in microphone, a 'drop-in' telephone microphone; and lapel, Chap Stick, inhaler, tie clasp and fountain pen microphones," the report said.

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., the subcommittee chairman, said "the Chap Stick connection really epitomizes" the failure of the IRS to appreciate the "public's sensitivity to dirty tricks."

But Alexander said the use of such electronic equipment had not been extensive, and Warren Bates, assistant commissioner for inspections, said those in use were "items they should not have had."

A second IRS internal audit said the agency had spent $283,264.52 in "confidential" funds on undercover projects between July, 1972, and March, 1975.

This report said IRS had trained more than 100 undercover agents since 1963 and deployed more than 20 of them on snooping operations which sometimes led to illegal activities.

"The national (intelligence) office provided each agent a 'cover' under an assumed name including a Social Security card, driver's license, military background, automobile registration and license, and prior employment history and references," the report said.

Israel peace plan gives no ground

By United Press International

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin unveiled Israel's plan for a permanent peace settlement with the Arab states Friday and said President Ford indicated it was not acceptable.

In an interview with the Israeli newspaper Ma'ariv, Rabin said he told Ford Israel will never return to its pre-1967 borders. He said Israel would insist on keeping Syria's Golan Heights and the eastern portion of Egypt's Sinai Peninsula and considered military control of the occupied West Bank of Jordan vital to its security.

Rabin's disclosures came as President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger met in Washington with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam in the final round of talks with the principals in the Middle East crisis as part of the reassessment of U.S. policy there.

Khaddam came to Washington at the invitation of the White House. Ford and Kissinger recently reviewed the situation with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Rabin.

In Beirut, Arab World, an authoritative daily newsletter, said Friday Syria now possesses "a new generation" of Soviet weapons that are "the most sophisticated ever to be sent to the Arab countries by Moscow." It gave no details.

Rabin said Israel wants a federation with Jordan to govern the West Bank, "based on a united, Israeli Jerusalem, open borders and free trade with Jordan, Israeli control of security and Jewish rights to settlement."

He said he explained the plan to Ford at their meeting in Washington last week, but: "... the president did not react or identify with any of the suggestions. I assume that these ideas were not accepted by the American administration."

Rabin said Israel is ready to make some changes in the front lines with Syria but "we will not come down from the Golan Heights."

He also said Israel considered Sharm el-Sheikh, the naval base that dominates the approaches to the Gulf of Aqaba and Israel's Red Sea port of Eilat, as vital to its security.

What's news

Gurney acquittal motion denied

TAMPA, Fla. — U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman Friday denied motions for a directed verdict of acquittal in the bribery-conspiracy trial of former Sen. Edward Gurney and three co-defendants. The judge ordered the defense attorneys to begin submitting their cases to the jury Monday. The order of defense presentations had not been determined.

Highway trust changes coming

WASHINGTON — Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. said Friday President Ford will soon propose that the size of the highway trust fund be drastically reduced and that it be limited to interstate highway construction. Of the four cents per gallon federal gasoline tax now going into the $7 billion per year fund, two cents would go into the general Treasury instead of the trust fund. Another one cent would be given, in effect, to the states. One cent of the federal tax would be removed in any state that raised its own gas tax one cent. The driving public would pay no more, but the state would get the benefit of the tax. This would leave one cent per gallon going into the trust fund, plus some lesser taxes such as the tax on new trucks.

Radical faces extradition

BOSTON — One-time college honor student Susan E. Saxe was to be extradited from Pennsylvania to Massachusetts sometime this weekend to face bank robbery and murder charges. A spokesman for the U.S. Marshal's Office said the time of arrival was unknown, but the former Brandeis University honor student would be arraigned Monday in U.S. District Court. Saxe, 26, of Albany, N.Y., entered a guilty plea this week in Philadelphia to the looting in 1970 of a Massachusetts National Guard armory. It was part of a plea bargaining disclosed 10 days ago in federal court here.

Soviets deploy MIRVs

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger said Friday the Soviet Union has deployed a new series of nuclear missiles with multiple warheads — so a single rocket could carry atomic bombs aimed at more than one target. Soviet deployment of MIRVs, short for multiple independently targetable re-entry vehicle, had been anticipated for some time. The United States already has MIRVs in its land based Minuteman 3 and submarine launched poseidon missiles and Schlesinger said, "We will not allow our position in this area to become secondary."

Terrorists get $60 million ransom

BUENOS AIRES — Juan Born, director of the third richest private company in Latin America who was kidnapped with his brother nine months ago in a bloody ambush, was freed Friday for what he said was a record $60 million ransom. He told newsmen his brother Jorge, 41, was released by the leftists Montoneros guerrillas three months ago, but the company decided to keep the news secret. He confirmed the powerful Bunge and Born Company had paid the $60 million ransom.

Grade school girls executed

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Two young girls found executed along an Everglades roadside canal were identified Friday as eighth-grade schoolmates who left their homes to spend an evening with a friend, authorities reported. The shooting victims, both aged 14, were identified by their parents as Barbara Susan Schreiber of Hollywood, and Belinda Darlene Zetterower of Fort Lauderdale. Broward County Deputy Dan Stubbs said the two girls were classmates at Attucks Middle School here.

Mideast invades women's confab

MEXICO CITY — Egyptian First Lady Jihan Sadat, bringing the Middle East conflict before the International Women's Conference, warned Friday that world peace can never become a reality as long as Israel occupies Arab lands. Her comments were the strongest political statement made so far at the conference, now in its second day. Some 2,000 delegates and observers, including six from the Palestinian Liberation Organization, attended Friday's session.

Mrs. Gandhi bids for support

NEW DELHI — Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, fighting for her political life, told an estimated half-million cheering supporters Friday her main concern was not staying in office but rather the welfare of the country. Mrs. Gandhi, who was convicted by a lower court last week of malpractice in the 1971 elections, said opposition calls for her resignation were just the latest effort in a five-year old campaign to force her from office. "There have been attempts to kill me and eliminate me," Mrs. Gandhi told the massive gathering in a New Delhi public park. "But I am not scared of anything. The people of India are with us. I am not worried if I do not stay as the prime minister. What worries me is the progress of the country."

Job fund extension approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Friday passed and sent to the White House a $1.6 billion appropriation to continue financing some 310,000 public service jobs that would expire June 30.

The money was included in a resolution that would continue to fund all federal agencies which have not received their appropriations for the new 1976 fiscal year that starts July 1.

The public service jobs money, which pays the salary of unemployed put to work by local and state governments, was in a $5.3 billion emergency jobs bill President Ford vetoed.

In addition, the newly passed resolution also contains $119 million for the college work-study program; $150 million for rural water and sewer grants; $10 million for the Youth Conservation Corps; and $70 million for the Work Incentive program to put welfare recipients to work.

All of these programs were also in the vetoed measure but $3 billion in public works projects in the rejected bill were not included in the continuing resolution which is now expected to get Ford's approval.

In another action, the House voted by voice to pass and sent to the White House a one-year extension of food stamp aid to recipients of the Supplemental Security Income program who are elderly and disabled needy Americans. Their eligibility in the program would end June 30.

Railroad strike deferred; 30 days set aside for talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After all-night negotiations, management and the railroad clerks union agreed Friday to talk for another 30 days in hopes of averting a nationwide railway strike.

The extra time means that there cannot be a walkout — and a major shutdown of U.S. rail service — before July 21.

The negotiations involve a contract between the national Railway Labor Conference, representing rail management, and the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees. Their last contract expired Dec. 31, 1974, and mediation was started Jan. 10.

The union, which represents 131,000 rail workers, was legally free to strike at 12:01 a.m. June 23, after exhausting all legal bargaining procedures set up to encourage transportation settlements without work stoppages.

A strike by the clerks would almost certainly shut down most of the nation's rail service because other union members would refuse to cross picket lines.

W. U. Usery Jr., special assistant to the President for labor management relations, and George Ives of the National Mediation Board aided in negotiating the additional breathing spell for the rails talks.

"We're hoping to find a solution during the extension period," a spokesman for the rail management said.

Just after Usery got the two sides to the bargaining tables again on Thursday, William H. Dempsey, head of the railroad company negotiators, declared, "It is very tough. The parties are a good distance apart."

C. L. Dennis, president of the union, had said, "We've had no real meaningful, gut bargaining yet."

"Bill Usery or Mr. Ford cannot bring it about unless there is bargaining," Dennis said.

Dennis has refused to accept a slightly modified "pattern" settlement made by seven other rail unions although this was urged on the clerks union by a Presidential Emergency Board.

Refugees march to seek return

FT. CHAFFEE, Ark. (UPI) — About 80 refugees who want to return to Vietnam began a peaceful demonstration for repatriation Friday. A spokesman for other refugees at the camp said a counter demonstration may be arranged.

The first group protested delays in their transfer from Ft. Chaffee to Camp Pendleton, the first step in the repatriation. Later in the day a spokesman for the second group labeled the demonstrators Viet Cong "agents" and said his group would seek permission for a counter demonstration if the original demonstration continues.

"They (the demonstrators) do not represent the majority of the refugees in this camp," said Nguyen My, 44, one of about 300 barracks leaders at Chaffee. "We fear their action has affected our future relocation and we don't accept their actions."

My said he hoped the demonstrators would be moved soon "because we don't want to hear the Communist propaganda in this camp. Send them home or isolate them."

"In my opinion, they are VC agents," said My.

A spokesman for the demonstrating refugees denied they were Communists.

"If we are Communists, we would never come to U.S., or if we were Communists we would stay in U.S. and send information back to Vietnam," said Le Minh Tan, 44. "We are not Communists. We just love our country and want to return."

Senior civilian supervisor Donald McDonald told the demonstrators they would be transferred to Camp Pendleton next Tuesday.

Judge heads Pocono arts center group

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Gov. Milton J. Shapp Friday named state Supreme Court Chief Justice Benjamin R. Jones to head a task force to build support for a proposed Pocono Arts Center.

Jones and Edward Mitchell, Shapp's press secretary, will work in northeastern Pennsylvania to get citizen approval for the proposal, which will cost $37 million, according to Shapp.

The task force will be known as the Patrons of the Pocono Arts Center.

Shapp said its job will be "to make clear the economic and cultural benefits of the proposed center and encourage support for its construction around the state with particular emphasis on convincing the legislature of the need for this facility."

Levi calls it courageous

Ford crime plan lauded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's crime-fighting proposals to Congress have a "very great" potential for making America a better place to live, Attorney General Edward H. Levi said Friday.

Levi agreed with Ford that the primary need is for mandatory prison sentences for major crimes and for individuals who repeatedly break the law. And he emphasized the President's call for state and local authorities to take a major anti-crime role.

The plan Ford submitted to the House and Senate Thursday is "courageous and strong," Levi said, and "it will work."

Asked if he meant the program, if carried out, would reduce the crime rate, he replied: "Yes, I do. Its influence over the nation can be very great."

Levi discussed the plan on the NBC-TV Today program.

The President urged that federal laws be stiffened to carry mandatory imprisonment in serious cases, even if for short terms; higher fines; payment up to $50,000 to crime victims; a tougher crackdown on organized crime; a limited increase in controls over handguns, and improvements in the prison system.

Both Ford and Levi emphasized that the states need to take their own tough measures against murder, rape, robbery, mugging and other violent crimes. And both urged the nation's judges to act more vigorously against offenders.

Levi said the program is not linked "to the idea of enormously long sentences. It is based on the idea that we'll do much better by hastening the pace of the criminal procedure system — by having quick trials, quick sentences and sure sentences."

'Unrepentant' Liddy to serve full sentence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Declaring that G. Gordon Liddy "has not shown the slightest remorse or regret," U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica Friday refused the Watergate mastermind's plea for a reduction of his prison sentence.

Sirica, in a tough-worded six-page order, also said that if Liddy is unable to pay his $40,000 fine, he can take a pauper's oath and serve an additional 30 days.

Sirica earlier shortened the sentences of several Watergate defendants, but they, unlike Liddy, had pleaded guilty and had cooperated with prosecutors.

The Supreme Court on Jan. 27 rejected Liddy's claim that Sirica failed to give him a fair trial and Liddy returned to prison to serve the remainder of his sentence of six years, eight months to 20 years for the 1972 bugging of the Democratic Headquarters.

Most of the 29 months Liddy already had served — by far the longest of any Watergate convicts — was levied by Sirica for contempt of court for refusal to testify before the Mass killer 'insane'

HAMILTON, Ohio (UPI) — James Ruppert's lawyer said Friday the 41-year-old bachelor murdered 11 of his relatives in an Easter Sunday massacre because he has been "medically and legally insane" for 10 years.

Ruppert has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the largest mass murder of members of one family in U.S. history.

If found innocent, a probate lawyer testified Ruppert would be the heir to a $300,000 family estate.

Shafer officials rushed to dole lucrative contracts

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth of a 10-part series on politics in Pennsylvania.

By JOHN L. MOORE
Ottaway News Service
Harrisburg Bureau
(Copyright 1975 by Ottaway News Service)

HARRISBURG — As eight years of Republican rule ended here in 1970, lame duck officials in Gov. Raymond P. Shafer's Department of Transportation attempted to dole out large numbers of lucrative non-bid contracts to engineering firms that had established themselves as generous contributors to the state GOP.

This disclosure gives a new perspective to Republican charges that Gov. Milton J. Shapp, a Democrat, has permitted his administration to give preferential treatment to Democratic contributors by awarding state business to their firms.

Many of the 1970 contracts were assigned by PennDOT during the two months between Shapp's election as governor and his inauguration, the period of November 1970 to mid-January 1971, Ottaway News Service learned.

Top officials of the Shapp administration, which canceled most of those contracts, have told Ottaway News Service they believe Shafer's officials attempted to award these contracts in order to reward GOP contributors.

"It was very inappropriate to assign these projects because the money wasn't budgeted for them," said a high-level Shapp administration source.

An extensive investigation by Ottaway News Service of the 1970 contract assignments has determined that:

— During the Shafer administration's last five months, PennDOT assigned 44 engineering contracts for proposed highway construction projects to 29 firms whose principals had donated more than a total $79,000 to the Republican State Committee during Shafer's four years as governor.

The contracts called for the state to pay fees ranging from $13,940 to $156,811 to these firms.

— Of these, 21 were assigned during the two months between Shafer's election and his inauguration even though PennDOT officials were aware the department lacked the funds to pay for this engineering work.

Whether Shafer Republicans were deliberately trying to reward GOP contributors by granting them contracts may never be known.

But there appears to be more than a casual relationship between the assignments made by PennDOT and contributions received by the Republican state party from engineering firms and their principals.

A comparison of PennDOT records and an extensive list of political contributions prepared last year by the legislature's select committee on state contract practices revealed that 44 of the total 51 engineering contracts assigned by PennDOT between September 1970 and mid-January 1971 were assigned to firms that were GOP contributors.

There is a difference between a contract assignment by PennDOT and a contract award.

A contract assignment is the first formal step towards executing a contract, and represents PennDOT's intention to have a particular engineering firm perform the engineering work for a specific highway construction project.

When a contract is assigned, PennDOT formally notifies the engineering firm that it has been selected for a specific project. The department then negotiates fees with the engineering firm and prepares a formal contract. The contract is not executed until it has been signed by both officers of the engineering firm and by appropriate PennDOT officials.

An inspection of PennDOT records dealing with a number of the 1970 contract assignments by Ottaway News Service disclosed that department officials had prepared contract agreements, and in one case, they had sent the agreement to an engineering firm for signatures.

These records also disclosed that the officials were aware that no money was available to pay for at least some of this work because memoranda addressed to Victor Anckaitis, Shafer's transportation secretary, stated this fact.

Shapp administration sources said they believe Republican officials ordered the assignments even though they realized the contracts could not be executed before Shafer's term expired in early 1971. But those officials ordered the assignments made anyway, "probably thinking the assignments would be honored by the succeeding administration," one source said.

The incoming Shapp administration did not honor the assignments, and Jacob Kassab, Shafer's transportation secretary who assumed control of PennDOT in early 1971, ordered 30 of them canceled.

"My staff brought them to my attention, and we immediately canceled them out because they were never budgeted," Kassab said.

Republican sources said the lame duck Shafer officials were stunned when Shapp was elected governor, and added there was a "tremendous rush" generally on the part of GOP officials to hand out state contracts to firms friendly to the Republican Party.

"There must have been a lot of I.O.U.'s out," one source said.

Bear facts about reading

Smokey lights intellectual fires

BRODHEADSVILLE — Parents throughout the West End are encouraging their children to get to know Smokey the Bear a little better this summer — not just so the children learn to prevent forest fires, but so they develop their reading skills.

In a special Smokey Bear Summer Reading Club, sponsored for the first time by the Western Pocono Community Library in Brodheadsville, more than 50 West End children are exploring the world of books.

The children, most of whom are in the first and second-grade levels, are required to read a book on animals, forest and plants, ecology, birds and insects, recreation, and five other books throughout the summer, according to the program.

The special club is open to any age child who wants to belong; even children who are too young to read themselves can participate in the program by having their parents read books to them.

Official membership in the club began June 3 and will continue throughout the summer. Books taken from the more than 500 in the current children's collection can be read in the library or at home.

When the children enroll in the club, they receive a Smokey Bear bookmark, membership card, and magazine, telling the story of Smokey Bear.

On Aug. 21, all those children who have read the required 10 books will receive a Smokey Bear lapel pin, as well as an official Smokey Bear Reading Club certificate, indicating that the child has read 10 books on nature and ecology throughout the summer.

Children who would like to enroll in the summer reading program may sign up at the Western Pocono Library during regular library hours. This week, the library will also be open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

HARRISBURG — Former Montour County Democratic chairman Paul Becker said Thursday that if state highway workers belonging to his Montour County Democratic Century Club received more overtime pay in 1974 than non-members, "it was purely coincidental."

Becker said he didn't "know a damn thing about" why six state employees stopped getting overtime after they told reporters last summer they had been pressured into making political contributions by Becker and others.

"I don't know a damn thing about it," Becker said.

"I have nothing to do with overtime," he said.

Ottaway News Service reported Thursday that an inspection of overtime records for employees of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation's maintenance unit in Montour County indicated that PennDOT employees who joined Becker's political club averaged more overtime pay than those who did not.

Former PennDOT secretary denies 'reward' contracts

HARRISBURG BUREAU
Ottaway News Service

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Transportation assigned non-bid engineering contracts on the basis of merit, not as rewards to political contributors as the administration of the state's last Republican governor ended in late 1970, a former Republican highway official said.

"You're completely off base," said Victor W. Anckaitis of Easton, Gov. Raymond P. Shafer's Republican administration.

Anckaitis said that "we in the department had no idea" who Republican Party contributors were. "We tried to play it straight and above board at all times," the former official said, adding, that political contributions "had no bearing on the assigning of contracts" by PennDOT while he was transportation secretary.

Anckaitis said it was coincidental that firms to which contracts were assigned at this time were also GOP contributors, but he added he was not surprised by this.

"I don't doubt they were contributors because that's a way of life in public life," he said at one point. "I am told that practically everybody, contractors who work for the state, support the party in power." He said a little later.

Clifford L. Jones, the Republican state chairman in 1970, also denied any relationship between the PennDOT contract assignments and political contributions received from engineering firms by the Republican state committee.

Asked why PennDOT's late 1970 contract assignments went mostly to state committee contributors, Jones replied, "I have absolutely no knowledge of that."

Jones also said, "I find it very hard to believe that the dumping of the contracts (in late 1970) was in essence a payment for the contributions."

The former GOP chairman disclosed, however, that the Republican state committee began running short of operating money in late 1970 and early 1971, and that GOP fundraisers appealed to many people.

Jones said the fundraisers may have requested contributions at this time from principals of engineering firms who received PennDOT contracts assignments. At this time, "I will not say some of the people were not solicited because we solicited everybody we could think of in January 1971 because we desperately needed money" for operating expenses, Jones said.

Monroe scouts ready for camp

TANNERSVILLE — More than 20 Scout Troops from the Pocono District will spend a week at the summer camps of the Minsi Trails Council, Boy Scouts of America, according to Ellis Riebel, summer camp chairman for the Pocono District.

"While each troop is taking part in its week-long camping experience, the scouts have an opportunity to practice many of the educational activities that are a part of the total scout program," Riebel said.

Riebel is assistant librarian at East Stroudsburg State College and also serves as the Webelos Leader of Pack 83, St. Matthews Church and as scouting coordinator for the Middle Smithfield Presbyterian Church, Pack 100.

The summer camps maintained by the Minsi Trails Council, Boy Scouts of America, a participating agency in the United Way of Monroe County and the Palmerton Community Chest, include Camp Minsi and Trexler Scout Reservation. The camps will operate from June 29 to Aug. 9 in six week-long sessions.

Camp Minsi features sailing on Stillwater Lake near Pocono Summit with nine troop sites and a large well-equipped dining hall.

Up Milford way

Great Gatsby in Milford

By NORMAN LEHDE

There was a time when it seemed to the youthful country observer that everybody from New York City must be rich. Such judgment was made during the "good old summer time" when the "city folks" arrived and their boys and girls seemed to be able to devote their summer days and nights in the Milford area to the tennis court, the beach and to driving automobiles faster than the posted limit.

It wasn't until later that the youthful observers learned there were men in constant struggle with the vicissitudes of the business world so their wives might be in the country and their children could spend time on the tennis court, the beach and driving automobiles faster than the posted limit.

Anyone who was young in the so called "roaring twenties" will recall the legend of the "rich city folks." It was rumored, but never admitted, that local prices were increased during the summer for their special benefit probably so they would not be embarrassed by having to purchase cheap merchandise.

There was one family who had been constant visitors to Milford over the years. They included two attractive daughters who were always dressed in the height of fashion and a son who always drove his Packard faster than anyone else. Certainly they would always have remained in local memories as part of the legend of the "rich city folks" had it not been for the Depression.

Within a short period of time after the crash of 1929, this family moved to Milford to live. The well dressed girls were soon wearing uniforms in the local diner. The son was also employed in the diner and nobody drove a Packard to work.

Seeing this family adjust to a different life style was one of the memorable events of the Depression years. During that time the idle young people who had frequented the tennis courts and the beach disappeared from the local scene as the fortunes of the family breadwinner or family business establishment waned.

Sure, there were other idle young people in the Depression years but they didn't devote a great deal of time to recreation unless it was something without an admission fee. The growing country youth came to realize that the world of those he had envied was far from indestructible. It was a discovery that most of them never forgot.

Congress abdicates energy crisis

WASHINGTON — Isn't it about time Congress adjourned politics as usual and joined with the President to rescue the United States from an unhealthy, perilous dependence on foreign oil?

Time is running out, and thus far nothing nearly equal to the need is in sight.

I'm not saying that Ford's proposals are the best thing ever invented, but they head clearly in the right direction; they are aimed at reducing our reckless consumption of energy now and reducing it more later.

Congress abdicated

But at this point Congress has abjectly abdicated. Nearly six months have passed since the Democratic leaders assured the President that if he would himself delay putting into effect his own measures they would give him a bill in his lap which would do the job.

To date Congress has not even produced a bad energy program. It has produced no energy program at all.

Chairman Al Ullman (D-Ore.) of the House Ways and Means Committee has worked valiantly. He proposed tough measures, and his colleagues in the House have shot them down.

In the latest scene of wreckage, the House gutted the major part of his energy-conservation bill by rejecting all increases in the gasoline tax. First, it threw out a possible 20-cent-a-gallon tax increase, though most of it would have been returned to individuals in tax rebates. Then it rejected a proposal half as ambitious and then stomped on a three-cent gas tax to finance research on new energy sources. Finally, it turned its face against any substantial tax on gas-guzzling automobiles.

Inaction evident

It is evident that the House of Representatives is not going to pass any kind of energy act which its own committees consider needed and urgent.

Just before it voted no on anything meaningful, Democratic Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill rose to the floor and earnestly asked his colleagues:

"Haven't we got the guts to stand up and vote for the future of America?"

The answer was not encouraging.

I am not suggesting that Ford can expect to get an energy act entirely to his own prescription.

The President knows that a tough energy-conservation law may prove politically unpopular — but is willing to act anyway.

Congress knows that such a tough energy-conservation law may prove unpopular — and is afraid to act.

I believe the American people will accept austere conservation when leadership is willing to lead and when Congress and the President act together.

Now is the time for some good men to come to the aid of the country.

If only we had Harry

By ALAN OTTEN

WASHINGTON — Politicians, journalists and political scientists vie in deploring the quality of the current crop of presidential candidates.

All pygmies, they insist; where are the equals of the Presidents and would-be Presidents of earlier times? Ah, there were giants on the earth in those days.

Now there may be some valid elements in that attitude. Certainly much of the public — perhaps influenced by the press and academics — sees things that way right now, and wants "none of the above." Yet there's also a great deal of mischievous nonsense in that approach; it isn't at all fair to the men presently running.

For one thing, earlier Presidents and presidential hopefuls tend to grow larger in retrospect. For another, there've been basic changes in the nature of the job and in the manner of election, and these, too, may seem to shrink contemporary candidates.

To be sure, there are occasional ego trippers in the current crowd, but so were there in former days. On the whole, the men running or most often mentioned for President today are a thoroughly presentable group, intelligent and experienced, at least on a par with most of the men who sought or held the office in the past.

Surely the advantages of hindsight and people's disposition to romanticize the past distort perceptions of the present. The Presidents now considered great weren't always so regarded when they took office or even when they left it; time and history have raised them, as time and history may raise the man who emerges from the pack next year.

The latter-day nostalgia for Harry Truman is a perfect case in point. His positive qualities and achievements have been magnified, his flaws and errors blurred or erased. It's easy to forget the near-panic that ensued when he was raised to the office in 1945, or how thoroughly he was belittled throughout his presidency.

When John F. Kennedy took aim at the White House in the late 1950s, his experience and record were, to say the least, minimal. When the Democratic Convention nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, H.L. Mencken wrote that it was "nominating the weakest candidate before it," and Walter Lippmann dismissed FDR then as "a pleasant man who, without any important qualifications for the office, would very much like to be President." Dean Don Price of the Harvard School of Government recalls a meeting of top welfare officials in December 1932 sadly bemoaning that in a time of unprecedented crisis, the nation had unfortunately elected a man who was clearly incompetent and so deeply committed to economy and state sovereignty that he'd never use the federal government's power to set things right.

Keep on going back. How great were the choices offered the nation in 1920 or 1900 or 1880 or 1868 or 1848 or a good many other years? When Abraham Lincoln ran in 1860, many Americans scorned him as a hick lawyer who'd served one term in the House and then lost a Senate race.

By comparison, today's swarm isn't really all that bad. In his 35 years in the Senate and House, Henry Jackson has repeatedly taken the lead on a wide variety of important issues. Lloyd Bentsen served eight years in the House and built a huge insurance company before coming to the Senate in 1971. Morris Udall has long been one of the most thoughtful, talented House members.

Terry Sanford was an outstanding governor of North Carolina and is now an able president of a major university. Jimmy Carter was an experienced naval officer and businessman before becoming a well-above-average governor of Georgia.

The GOP picture is the same: Gerald Ford, an incumbent President with long prior service in the House; Vice President Rockefeller, an innovative governor of New York for 15 years, with broad Washington experience before that; Ronald Reagan, for eight years governor of one of the largest states; Sen. Charles Percy, an experienced businessman as well as an unusually active Senator; and so on.

"Many of the obscure candidates now are equal to most of the President's we've had," asserts political scientist James Sundquist.

Somehow, though, Americans don't see it that way. They don't regard today's candidates, not even the incumbent President, as very impressive and there must be some explanation for that, besides the tendency to romanticize the past.

Clearly the demands of the job have grown, and the public's image of the job has perhaps grown even more. America's powerful world position, the intricacies of current foreign and domestic crises, the concentration of power in Washington and other factors have expanded the responsibilities and powers of the presidency to the point where many voters doubt anyone's big enough to fill it.

In earlier, simpler times, it didn't seem to matter so much if Presidents or would-be-Presidents weren't too imposing. In fact, maybe it was even more restful to have lesser men in the White House. Now, though, even Jefferson or Lincoln might not seem adequate.

The method of nominating and electing Presidents has also changed dramatically, and that's part of the problem, too. In the old days, the nominating process was far more private. Except for a few lofty speeches each hopeful would stay on his job as governor or Senator, while his campaign manager traveled around making deals with the dozen or so party leaders who would eventually pick the nominee. Often, the man would first come to broad public notice as the official nominee — with all the automatic constituency and credibility the title conferred. Once nominated, he was instantly more "presidential," less "pygmy."

Now, in contrast, a candidate must spend several years making platitudinous speeches at coffee hours and party dinners, appearing on TV panel shows, raising money, fighting in 20 or 30 primaries. He is one of a pack clamoring and clawing in constant public view. Little wonder he seems hardly presidential, no matter what his experience or other qualifications.

"If we still had strong parties today," presidential scholar Richard Neustadt ventures, "and 50 bosses were going to do the picking, we'd all be sitting around saying 'What a rich array of hopefuls for the bosses to choose from.'"

The decline in party strength — and the rising impact of television — also put a far greater premium on a candidate's personality and "charisma." The complexity of current problems and the way demands of vocal interest groups so often conflict, similarly make candidates stress style over substance.

With television, the public sees the candidate more closely than ever, and the TV camera tends to magnify the warts more than the beauty marks. A boo-boo that would go unnoticed in a stump speech can demolish a candidate when it's made on nationwide TV.

Certainly the politicians, press and public shouldn't simply suspend judgment until someone has been nominated or elected. But perhaps they should look at the present pack a little more realistically, measuring them against each other rather than against some impossible concept of the job or against some mythical giants of the past.

Legion runs against change

The flap over the location of the new American Legion home on East Fifth Street in East Stroudsburg is something that couldn't have (and probably wouldn't have) happened a few years ago.

That's so for two reasons, one sociological and one legal.

Legally, an establishment such as the American Legion was allowed to locate in an R-3 residential zone under the old (1967) zoning ordinance. Now, a special use variance is necessary for non-profit social clubs to locate in a residential area.

The sociological implications are perhaps the more interesting (and are, no doubt, behind the change in the zoning law).

Veterans organizations, although they are striving mightily for a comeback, have suffered perhaps unfairly but certainly unduly as a result of the Vietnam-inspired distaste for all things military. Veterans' groups have lost prestige as well as membership and don't have the clout they once enjoyed.

There also is that aspect of, for example, Legion posts that people, perhaps now viewing things more realistically, perceive as undesirable in certain locations — the business aspect.

In order to defray overhead expenses, veterans' groups traditionally open their facilities for parties, wedding receptions and so forth. One of the things such events support is a bar for the use of members. Another usually is a game room — pool table, ping pong table, card tables, etc.

Put it all together, and the residents around a proposed site just might see little difference between a veterans' post and a commercial establishment. Traffic, noise and all the usual objectionable aspects of a business are brought up as reasons to block the location.

A few years ago, that might not have been considered. But times have changed, we are not what we used to be, and the George N. Kemp American Legion Post is facing an unexpected and dismaying obstacle to relocating its home.

No foresight

Sometimes we are left with the inescapable conclusion that labor unions are the most short-sighted groups in the nation.

The head of one of the major railroad unions is threatening a strike because he has been unable to win agreement to workers' demands that are expected to come to $2.6 billion over the next three years.

This, at a time when railroads are sinking deeper and deeper in the red; when the nation's rail network is in the advanced stages of decay and dissolution; when contemplated energy programs will put a premium on a strong and viable railroad system.

If ever railroads needed a respite from the financial pressures of intransigent union demands it is now. You would think the unions would recognize that, and also recognize that a faltering railroad system hardly provides the job security unions traditionally pursue.

Letters to the editor

Put school needs first

Editor, The Record:

After three hours of listening to fifteen per cent of the taxpayers at last week's school board hearing on the proposed budget, I was impressed with how we as people want quality education but are unwilling to take responsibility for it by paying for it.

We citizens of the USA are among the most highly taxed in the world. Who likes the IRS? Direct your energies properly, toward state legislative change on tax inequities, and political action. Locally, demand input into school board action by forming citizen's advisory boards. Be informed well before the 8th hour of budget decisions.

Those of us who can pay, why not car pools for the more affluent? What we demand nowadays as parents is total security. Is that part of a good education?

Be realistic! In classrooms already too large, an elimination of teacher aides represents a cut in quality education.

In classrooms where teachers are put into new teaching situations, such as the open space concept in the Middle School, an elimination or a cut in in-service training represents a cut in quality education.

In classrooms where we are educating our children to be citizens of the world, as well as of the USA, for a world where knowledge of other peoples is of paramount importance for their future, elimination of the foreign language program represents a cut in quality education.

Be honest! The noise levels in most homes is a constant blare of a TV going full blast, weekdays and on weekends. Silence in a school does not mean learning is taking place. It means youngsters are being controlled to be quiet; not that they are thinking.

Check your values. In overcrowded classrooms, a further reduction in personnel increases the lack of individual attention, known to be a deterrent to dropouts.

Worried about our youth? Worried about juvenile delinquency? What about adult delinquency? Support our schools with all your resources. Citizens, where do you stand?

How to save money

Editor, The Record:

Self-service elevators were installed in the Senate office building. The elevator operators were kept on to assist the senators. Why the self service elevators and how much money did it cost the taxpayers to make these elevators self service? Saving money?

I think I know why the operators were kept on. Democrats and Republicans enter the elevator together. The Democrats want to go up. The Republicans are going down. This is a serious situation. They cannot agree, so decide to caucus.

The Republicans introduce a bill to have the Democrats do the complicated and hard labor of pushing the buttons on the Republican's command. The President, who is in Asia, must be informed of proceedings, so Air Force

2 is dispatched to Asia to inform the President and to bring back two Republicans whose votes are needed.

The Democrats add an Amendment to the bill. They will agree if $30,000,000 is given to the Democrats for election and lobbying purposes. This is agreeable to the Republicans. (Later they can pass a bill outlawing the $30,000,000.)

Now the problem is which Democratic senator will push the buttons? It is below the dignity of a long-time senator to push buttons. So it is decided to give the job to the most junior senator. It is now found two junior senators have exactly the same amount of service. This requires another caucus.

After two weeks of debate it is decided the two junior senators will take turns pushing the buttons, with the former elevator operators as instructors. Now that the former operators are now instructors they get a 50 per cent raise in salary.

That's the way to save money — government style.

Editor, The Record:

Been watching the condition of the "Railroad" bridge in East Stroudsburg.

Seems the "temporary" repairs did not do much good. It is in a sad state as of now.

Do you suppose if I took it up with the Safety Commission we could get some quick action?

That will be my next step, since the promise to have it repaired by June has gone by the board again, even though the government appropriated $421,000 for beautification and urban renewal in East Stroudsburg.

Clarifies talk

Editor, The Record:

As executive director of the Burnley Workshop of the Poconos, Inc., I feel it is my duty to clear up a misunderstanding that was taken from the talk given by Peter Cegelka at the Chamber of Commerce meeting on Monday, June 16.

1. The views expressed by Cegelka on refugees were strictly his own and not the views of the Burnley Workshop.

2. Although we do have 15 employees that are placeable, they can not be placed en masse but must be placed on an individual basis.

3. I think Saturday's article clearly stated that the jobs to be given to these people were not vacant jobs but were jobs being created for humanitarian reasons.

4. Pocono Mountain industries and resorts have been very cooperative in the past in hiring our people and in helping us in any way possible.

Jeffrey Hart

The leaders of the Democratic Party have been wringing their hands over the threat George Wallace poses to business as usual, and they have launched a series of ineffective ploys designed to damage Wallace. Nothing has worked, and nothing of the kind can possibly work. The politicians would do themselves a favor if they asked why.

For the record, here are the ploys that struck out, in rough chronological order. First, the Democratic Machiavellis tried to cancel the primaries in states where Wallace would do well. This stratagem collapsed as soon as it was brought out into the light of day, crumbling like Dracula when the sun hit him. Its hypocrisy was all too blatant.

Then there was the favorite-son strategy by which, it was thought, various governors would try to block Wallace in their states. The governors, however, adhered to the GIs' motto, "Never volunteer."

The "new Southerner" play never really got off the ground. No one seriously believes that Terry Sanford or Jimmy Carter or someone like that is going to knock Wallace out of the race.

Next we had a sudden spate of speeches and articles attacking Wallace's performance as Governor of Alabama — how Alabama has a sales tax, how Alabama has a low per-pupil expenditure, etc. Wallace merely breathed a few words about New York City, Washington, D.C. and Boston, Mass., which have flourished, to these many years, under liberal auspices.

Little profit

The play about Wallace's health profited the Democratic politicians little. FDR sat in a wheelchair. And, as Wallace cheerfully commented, "Better to be paralyzed from the waist down than from the neck up."

It was an apt comment. Though they are, some of them, intelligent men, Wallace's Democratic antagonists are indeed paralyzed politically from the neck up.

So nothing is working very well against Wallace, and the politicians and the media might try asking why. Wallace swats these plays with all the ease with which he might swat flies on a warm Alabama afternoon.

Wallace's invulnerability is rooted in a glaring contemporary fact: the disastrous separation of the ruling elite (using the term "elite" in its technical sociological sense) from the rest of the population.

The classical theoretician of the idea of the elite was the Italian sociologist Gaetano Mosca. He argued that all societies are in fact run by an elite, whatever the ostensible form of the government — democracy, monarchy, dictatorship, or whatever. The elite includes politicians and bureaucrats, but also the wielders of economic, intellectual, and cultural power, the educated, the articulate, and the influential. The elite mediates between the formal sovereign power and the mass of the ruled. It renders power legitimate by articulating and embodying the ideals and goals of the society.

Key point

But — and here is Mosca's key point for our purposes — there must not be too large a gap between the attitudes and ideas of the elite and those of the nation at large. When the elite and the populace are at loggerheads, the nation undergoes a kind of cultural civil war. The sense of strain can become unbearable.

Just such a gap has now opened up, and George Wallace is rolling his wheelchair right through it.

If the politicians want to stop Wallace, the means are ready at hand and they do not consist of irrelevant little ploys. All the politicians have to do is stop busing school children, stop taxing the middle class for favorite elite boondoggles, stop moralizing about the horrible misdeeds of America at home and abroad, start addressing themselves seriously to the problems of pornography and violent street crime, and begin acting as if the U.S. were a major power with serious interests in an often hostile world.

If they did that, Wallace would be stopped. But they won't.

U.S. won't relent on Cuba — yet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — San Jose, a placid Central American city surrounded by green slopes thick with coffee trees, will be the site of the next round in the long effort to solve the thorniest issue still dividing the Organization of American States—the sanctions imposed on Cuba in 1964.

Representatives of 21 of the organization's 25 members, including the United States, will meet in the Costa Rican capital July 16-28 to revise the 1947 Inter-American Treaty of Mutual Assistance (Rio Treaty) under which the sanctions were imposed against the Fidel Castro regime 11 years ago.

That would make it possible for OAS member nations to legalize the demise of the already toothless sanctions.

But regardless of what happens, the Ford administration has ruled out an early detente between Washington and Havana. President Ford said in a recent interview that the 1962 U.S. trade and travel ban will be continued "until there is some change in policy by Cuba toward the United States."

The Ford administration also has criticized congressional attempts to lift the U.S. embargo. William D. Rogers, Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, asked Congress on June 11 to keep hands off the "intricate" question of when and how to lift the embargo.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who was criticized for not attending a meeting last fall in Ecuador that failed to resolve the issue, won't go to San Jose, either. Perhaps anticipating that possibility, the recent OAS general assembly, which called the San Jose conference, decided delegations may be headed by "plenipotentiaries."

"This means that you can send anybody you want...as long as you give him full powers," Rogers said recently. Will the OAS finally rid itself of the divisive Cuban sanctions in San Jose? Theoretically it could. Legally and practically, it's uncertain.

What is certain is that article 17 of the Rio Treaty will be overhauled to permit ending the Cuban embargo, as well as other actions, by a simple majority vote (11) instead of the present two thirds (14).

(The OAS has 25 members—24 active and Cuba, which was excluded in 1962. But only 21 of the active members are signatories of the Rio Treaty and may participate in the San Jose conference. Jamaica, Barbados and Grenada do not belong to the Rio Treaty.)

If the San Jose delegates do reform the Rio Treaty, they theoretically could regroup on the spot wearing another hat (that of an "Organ of Consultation") and then lift the sanctions—a possibility raised by Rogers at a May 21 news conference.

This would be a purely political action, however, and would clash with the legal argument advanced by some countries that the sanctions cannot be removed until the treaty revisions have been ratified by two-thirds of the member nations. That could take up to two years.

But Rogers, reflecting Washington's growing interest in taking the issue out of the OAS, indicated it not be necessary to wait for ratification. He said that once there is agreement in principle to change the voting procedure, "there is a possibility that there will be an interim agreement" in San Jose to act, indirectly, on the Cuban sanctions.

Asked whether such an "interim agreement" would mean the end of the 1964 sanctions, Rogers replied:

"The mandate of the OAS to the member countries that they do not conduct diplomatic and trade relations with Cuba would be finished. Each country would essentially then be free to decide whether or not to conduct diplomatic and trade relations."

In other words, the San Jose conference could close the controversial chapter of inter-American relations that was opened in Washington in July, 1964.

Ann Landers

Sitters' problem

Dear Ann Landers: May I add a word of advice for both mothers and sisters — on behalf of the child?

It can be very traumatic for a youngster to be left with a total stranger on a moment's notice. The sitter should be invited to the house as a guest to say hello a day or so before she takes on her first job with a new child.

It can be a terrifying experience for a little one to be left with a person he or she has never seen before. The sitter must then calm the child and reassure him, and this can be a difficult job.

So please, Ann, add this suggestion to your list of "helpful hints" for both mothers and sitters. —

It Happened To Me

Dear Happ: Excellent suggestion. Thank you for writing. Your letter is a good example of how an ounce of prevention can be much better than a pound of cure.

Dear Ann Landers: I am in love with a man who is 27. We became engaged a short time after we dated — two and a half months, to be exact. We both felt we were just right for each other, so why wait? We announced our engagement last week and arrangements are being made for our wedding.

There's a problem that keeps me up nights. My fiancé cannot seem to get over his former girl friend. They talk on the phone and see each other occasionally. I believe he is still in love with her. He refuses to discuss it, but I know something is there. I'm afraid I caught him on the rebound and he is too much of a gentleman to back out. How do I find out if I'm right or wrong? He's not a very good talker and I'm not a very good listener. This is a cry for help, Ann. —

Three's A Crowd

Dear C: You are obviously beset with doubts, which is no way to go into a marriage. Cancel the wedding plans at once and give your fiancé his freedom. If he really loves you and not the old flame you'll know it within a few months. It's easier, my dear, to reinstate plans for a wedding than to go through a divorce.

Dear Ann Landers: You sometimes print pet gripes which can be very useful because people learn from them. Here's mine: The Wrong Number.

I often wonder who these people are who make phone calls at 3:00 a.m. Either they are insomniacs or folks who work nights and sleep during the day.

It so happens that my husband and I work days and we need our sleep at night. This past month we have been awakened three times between 3:00 and 4:00 a.m. by some jerk looking for "Alice." Once that phone jangles us out of a sound sleep the night is shot. It also means feeling lousy the next day. It just isn't fair.

Please, Ann, ask your readers to dial with care — especially after midnight. It's the very least one can do for his fellow man. Thank you. —

Red-Eyed This Morning

Dear Red: Here's your letter and I hope it helps. Unfortunately, at least half of those wrong numbers (especially the jerks who are looking for "Alice") can't see the dial for the booze — so please don't expect me to produce miracles.

Dear Ann Landers: I have long, beautiful fingernails.

They are my best "feature," if you can call them that. What I mean is, I get more compliments on my nails than on anything else.

My boyfriend loves to bowl. Every time I have gone bowling with him, I've broken at least two nails. I refuse to bowl anymore and he is very upset with me. Is he being fair? What should I do?

Nailed In N.J.

Dear N.J.: Go with him — as a spectator. Be his cheering section. Applaud his efforts. Build up his ego. That should satisfy him. If it doesn't — too bad.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	3 ♠	3 ♠	1 ♥

Opening lead — king of clubs.

The most interesting hands to play are those where the contract seems hopeless and declarer, by good play, manages to make the contract.

Consider this deal where West, after cashing two clubs, shifts to a low diamond. Looking at all four hands, it is not easy to see how South can now make four hearts. It seems he must inevitably lose a diamond and a spade to go down one.

But correct play lands the contract, and there is nothing the defense can do to stop it. South wins East's jack of diamonds with the king, plays a trump to the ace, ruffs a club, and draws three more trumps, producing this position:

North
♠ 9 4
♥ A 5
♦ 10

♠ K J
♥ 10 8
♦ J

South
♠ A Q
♦ 9 6

Declarer plays his last trump, forcing West to discard a diamond, as dummy and East part with a spade. Having squeezed West out of a diamond, South plays a diamond to the ace, returns a club and discards his diamond loser on it.

This loser-on-loser discard endplays West. He is forced to win the club and return a spade, thus handing South the contract.

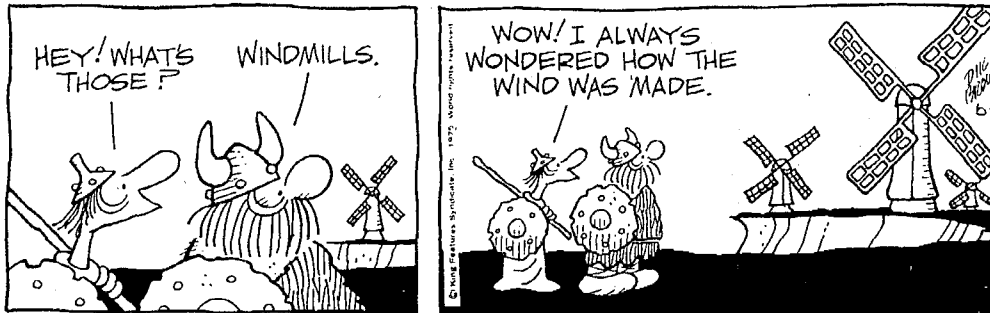

Declarer's method of play is clearly correct — even without seeing the missing cards — because the bidding clearly marks West with the king of spades. Repeated trump leads render West helpless.

Mrs. David Noble

Sue Ellen James weds David Noble

STROUDSBURG — Sue Ellen James and David Noble were married May 15 in Stroudsburg Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard James, 1187 Appenzeller Ave., Stroudsburg. The bridegroom is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sharbaugh, 440 N. Fifth St., Stroudsburg.

Mrs. Gwen Haney, sister of the bride, East Stroudsburg R.D. 3, was matron of honor. Mrs. Valerie Klass, East Stroudsburg R.D. 3, was bridesmaid.

Kerry Ann Klass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Klass, East Stroudsburg R.D. 3, and Abby Lynn Hoke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Hoke, Kellersville, were flower girls.

William Klass, East Stroudsburg R.D. 3, was best man. Sherwood A. Gower, Saylorsburg, and Richard A. James, brother of the bride, were ushers.

A reception for 100 guests was held at the Elks Club.

The bride is a graduate of Stroudsburg High School and Allentown Hospital School of Nursing. She works at McKeesport Hospital.

Her husband is also a graduate of Stroudsburg High and is attending Pittsburgh Institute of Aeronautics. He served three years in the U.S. Army.

A wedding trip to the Poconos is planned.

The couple will make their home at 614 Monongahela Ave., Glassport.

Electric crocks selling fast

By LORA SHARPE
Family Fare editor

STROUDSBURG — Even cooking has returned to a nostalgia stage — crocks are once again one of the most popular items for the kitchen.

Of course, these crocks are made of a variety of modern hardware and are all-electric. Electric crockery pots and slow cookers are becoming fixtures in kitchens throughout the country.

Crock pots and slow cookers are designed to cook dinners, snacks and even desserts while the cook himself is elsewhere. Meals may be cooked in the electric crock up to 18 hours at low temperatures.

An estimated 10 million electric crockery pots were sold by 20 manufacturers in 1974. Sales are expected to double in 1975. Locally, outlets report brisk sales.

One of the best indicators of the crockery pot's popularity is that a cookbook especially for use with the new appliance, "Crockery Cookery," by Mable Hoffman, has been on the New York Times paperback best seller list for almost two months.

The book reportedly has sold

400,000 copies in its large format editions, published by H.P. Books Tucson, Ariz., since its appearance last February.

Bantam Books will now publish a $1.95 paperback edition. A first printing of 350,000 copies is expected to be on bookstands by July 1.

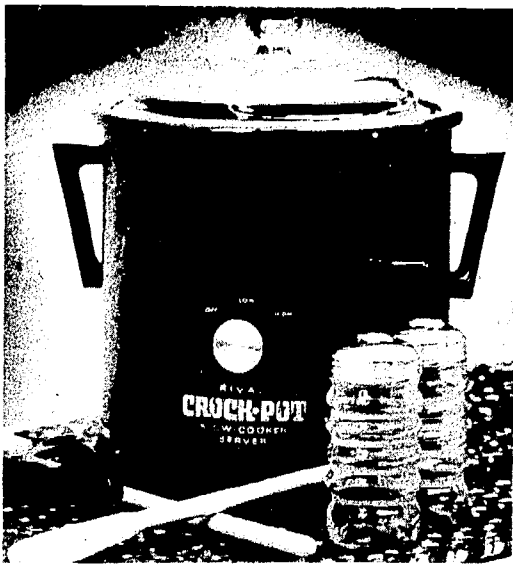

Those who use the crockery pots claim the appliance allows them to tailor cooking scheduled to work and activity calendars.

For example, a working woman can have dinner all prepared in the morning, put it in the crockery cooker and have it ready when she comes home at night.

"All you have to do is make your salad and you're all set," said one crockery cook.

Crockery cookery may save some time by eliminating some steps in meal preparation, but its chief advantage is not in saving time but in using time available to its best advantage.

In other words, a cook still has to complete most of the same cooking procedures — but he can do so when he wants or has time to rather than when he has to.

Rival's Crock-Pot stands ready.

A cook can bake bread, make dessert, concoct punch and even cook sandwiches in a crockery cooker.

There are some disadvantages to the electric crocks, though.

The Penn State Cooperative Extension Service has warned that cooks may allow food to cook in the crock too long at temperatures too low to kill bacteria.

Food should not remain at temperatures between 60 and 120 degrees for more than two hours. It should not remain at temperatures between 40 and 140 degrees for more than four hours.

Those time periods include preparation, room storage time and cooking time. Also, while foods may reach the required temperatures at the outside of the pot in time, the center of the food may not do so until later.

Crockery cooks don't necessarily need specialized recipes for their crock dishes. Recipes can be converted with some adjustment; not everything can be cooked in a crock.

For instance, the amount of liquid in recipes can be reduced. According to Rival Manufacturing's home economist (Rival makes the trademarked Crock-Pot), half the recommended amount of liquid is sufficient. One cup of liquid should be enough for most recipes unless rice or pasta is used.

Crockery cooking eliminates such steps as sauteing vegetables and browning meats. Milk, seafood, frozen foods and milk products should be added only during the last hour of cooking. Less spice should be used as long cooking brings out their flavor.

Dieters shed fat for camper

STROUDSBURG — The way to summer camp for an area child will be paved with the lost bulges of Weight Watchers.

Weight Watchers in Stroudsburg will donate 10 cents for each pound lost between now and July 4 to a campership for Annette Baxter, eight, of Stroudsburg.

The two-week campership at the YMCA camp is valued at $45.

In order to send Annette to camp, each of the 86 members of Weight Watchers in the Stroudsburg program must lose a little over five pounds before the Fourth of July.

Weight Watchers follow a program of dieting which should provide needed nutrients but still result in weight loss — in fact, Linda Jacobs, executive counselor of Weight Watchers of Eastern Pennsylvania guarantees that loss.

In order to meet their $45 goal, the local group invites the public to join the weight losing game.

Weight Watchers meets once a week for a lecture on some aspect of dieting and to evaluate progress. Each member is weighed at the meeting and his weight loss for the week and total weight loss is pronounced before the group.

The Weight Watchers group has been meeting at the Monroe county YMCA for seven years. Classes are held at 9:30 a.m. Wednesdays and at 7 p.m. Thursdays.

Fantasy may be healthy

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. — Walter Mitty was right all along. The daydreaming antics of James Thurber's beloved hero are backed up today with clinical and experimental research showing that fantasies are normal to all active minds. "Through daydreams our brains put us through mental rehearsals and keep us aware of the unfinished business in our lives," says Dr. Jerome L. Singer, professor of psychology at Yale University.

Writing in the June issue of "Reader's Digest," Dr. Singer notes that fantasies are part of the fabric of everyday life, and that they occur frequently — even in the midst of demanding tasks.

While daydreams are useful, as Mitty found, to escape the tedium of a humdrum existence, they also perform a more vital and dynamic function, Dr. Singer believes. They help make life more creative and original, for one thing. Many scientists find an avenue toward discovery in their reveries. Einstein, for instance, daydreamed about what would happen if a man could fly out into space at the speed of light, and in the process developed an important feature of his theory of relativity.

They help develop your personality, says the professor, "As if" fantasies — as if you were in charge, chairman, manager or hero of the scene — often point in times of loneliness and soothing in times of distress. Research at Harvard points to many ways in which awareness of your recurrent daydreams can provide clues to facets of your motives and personality. An examination of your fantasies will often tell you something valuable about your ambitions and needs.

Players elect officers

STROUDSBURG — The Phoenix Players have named officers for the upcoming year as follows:

Melva Barney, president; Sami Behar, vice president; Edie Miller, recording secretary; Alan Keiper, treasurer.

The players have decided that plans for a full-scale theatre production will be postponed until September as many of the members are engaged in other theatrical pursuits this summer.

Several Phoenix Players are attending the theatre workshop at East Stroudsburg State College, two are appearing at the Limelight Theatre and several are working on "Tales from the Earth Father," a television series.

The players will continue the play-reading workshops every second and fourth Thursday at 7 p.m. at the YMCA, Main Street, Stroudsburg.

Further information about the players can be obtained by writing P.O. Box 533, Stroudsburg.

Training for parenthood necessary?

NEW YORK (UPI) — We shape the training of teen-agers in everything from physical fitness to careers to come. But we leave a big gap where training counts the most if the family structure is to survive.

We neglect education for parenthood.

Yet teen marriages are multiplying and with them the problems of young parents not prepared for responsibilities of child rearing.

Statistics show that one in every ten 17-year-old girls in the United States is a mother. In 1974 about 220,000 girls aged 17 or under gave birth, 15 per cent of them for the second or third time. Such early childbearing means greater health risks than having children after 20.

"Early childbearing also frequently leads to early marriages, repeated pregnancies, unstable family life and welfare dependency," says a new publication which examines training for parenthood — or lack of training.

"Wed or unwed," it says, "teen-age parents are apt to cut short their schooling and acquire only marginal work skills. Their prospects are dim."

The national divorce rate for those married in their teens is three to four times higher than for any other age group. Nine per cent of teen-age mothers attempt suicide, seven times the national rate for teen girls who have no children, says the publication, "Preparing Tomorrow's Parents."

The publisher is the Public Affairs Committee, Inc., a nonprofit educational organization headquartered in New York. The author is Elizabeth Ogg, who writes on many sociological subjects.

Mrs. Ogg cites such examples, where lack of training created problems, as the teenage mother who insists her child should not eat if he isn't toilet trained by age one and one-half. A toddler who accidentally falls over a sidewalk cellar door is spanked by his mother. A young father hits his seven-month-old baby for pulling the nipple off his bottle.

Says Mrs. Ogg, "Swamped with responsibilities they haven't bargained for and don't know how to handle, and often cut off from opportunities for their own further development, they vent their frustrations on their youngsters."

Inadequate parenting is one of the reasons for emotional and physical abuse of children, says Mrs. Ogg. "Most shocking of all, at least 700 children are killed every year by their parents or parent substitutes."

But some private groups and government are doing something about education for parents. She cited a Save the Children Federation project in Lincoln County, W.Va., that trains teen-agers as child advocates. The teens visit preschoolers and parents in their homes, bringing educational games, toys and books with them.

The National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers, which concentrates on low income urban youth, includes rap sessions with film showings and guest speakers, plus observation field trips, outings and parties to help create a group feeling.

In its three-pilot programs, Boys' Clubs of America teaches video taping for programs on various aspects of childhood and preparation for parenthood.

ESSC offers credit tests

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg State College will offer interested individuals, both young and old, an opportunity to earn college credit by examination through the College Board's College-Level Examination Program.

CLEP tests will be administered at the college on an individual appointment basis. East Stroudsburg is one of more than 840 CLEP testing centers throughout the country.

Introduced nationally in 1967 as a new activity of the College Board, CLEP is a national system of awarding college credit by examination. The program is based on the concept that individuals should receive college credit for what they know no matter how they learned it. Originally designed for adult students who have continued their education outside the classroom through on-the-job and military training, independent study and so on, the program has been increasingly used by high school students who are about to enter college.

There are two types of CLEP Examinations. The General Examinations measure learning in five basic areas of liberal arts (English Composition, Mathematics, Natural Sciences, Humanities, Social Sciences-History); the Subject Examinations measure achievement equivalent to that gained in 41 undergraduate college courses.

CLEP can save individuals time and money by enabling them to demonstrate their college-level competencies and thus earn college credit or job advancement. In addition to East Stroudsburg, approximately 1,500 colleges and universities will award credit on the basis of CLEP scores.

The College Board reports that last year some 82,000 individuals took CLEP tests through college and university testing centers; another 6,000 candidates took tests in American installations overseas or at special test centers established by government agencies and business and industry.

Further information about CLEP can be obtained from Dr. Robert F. Macmillan, Director of Counseling Services at East Stroudsburg State College.

Write to know

Q. I recently wrote to Write To Know about cleaning a brass bed. You provided me with the name of a cleanser. What I really wanted to find was a professional to do the job. It should be dipped much the same way you strip wood that has many coats of paint. Can you help me?

E.A., Stroudsburg

A. If coats of paint are the problem, it may be possible to be done at Nealis Antiques in Scotrun. Give the shop a call at 629-0580 and they may be able to help you.

Q. I answered a classified ad in The Pocono Record last March for creative sewers. I worked for the company, which was called "The Heavens, Inc.," and made four sample dresses and four evening shirts. I was told to deliver them to the Sheraton in Stroudsburg, which I did. I've never received any pay for my work. I wrote a letter to the company, but never received a reply. Is there any way I can receive my money?

M.T., Brodheadsville

A. A spokesman for "The Heavens" claims its records are in a state of confusion, which may be the reason you had trouble collecting for your work. He apologized and said if you call collect at 1-609-392-9389 he will act to correct the company's error.

Q. On Feb. 11, 1974 I made a final payment to Universal Relocation Service in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. to help find a job overseas. I have receipts for $200 for these services. Nothing has been done for me. Is this organization reputable? Do I have the right to get my money back after all this time?

E.V., Stroudsburg

A. You should have become suspicious before this time. Universal Relocation Service and its promoter, William Dunn, are long gone without a trace. The Philadelphia Better Business Bureau received quite a few complaints about Dunn while he still was in business, but the BBB, the Bureau of Consumer Protection in Allentown, and the Bureau of Employment Agencies have no record of his present whereabouts. Dunn was indicted in New Jersey for defrauding clients in June of 1974 and Florida authorities were chasing him too, but apparently he closed up shop in Pennsylvania before the law caught up with him. There's not much hope you'll ever see your $200 again. Beware of Dunn. He has had a number of similar operations and may surface again with a new gimmick in the future, authorities say.

Q. I recently purchased a jar of instant tea at a supermarket in Brodheadsville for $1.99. The cost of the same quantity of tea in a Stroudsburg store was also $1.99. One day later in Allentown I purchased the same size jar of tea for $1.39. A 60 cents difference in the price of the same item is ridiculous. Why is the price so different? What's the explanation for this overcharge?

L.W., Kunkletown

A. Supermarket prices can and do vary widely. The store with the higher price is not necessarily overcharging you. Instead the store with the lower price may be offering the item at a greatly reduced price as a loss leader.

Keep comparison shopping and buy where you get the best value for your dollar.

Aside to C.D., Stroudsburg: A reader provided us with the name of a company that manufactures handles which will fit Wonder Ware. Write to Regal Ware, Inc. in Kewaskum, Wisconsin and explain what you're looking for.

Aside to S.L., Stroudsburg: Your question on motorcycle regulations is too vague for us to provide you with an answer. What specifically do you want to know about reconstructed motorcycles?

Aside to P.C., Stroudsburg: RCA Music Service issued a replacement order of records which will be sent to you via first-class mail.

Aside to M.S., Portland: Marshall Cavendish's customer service department is in the process of shipping a replacement order to you. Expect it within three weeks.

Aside to T.G., Stroudsburg: Liggett and Myers contacted the firm which handled its belt and bag offer and requested a replacement kit be mailed to you. Expect it within two weeks.

Q. Where can people pay to pick strawberries in the area?

S.V., Saylorsburg

A. Heckman's Orchard along Rte. 115 in Effort has strawberries you can pick. You must call ahead at 629-1191 to let them know when you're coming.

IF YOU KNEW SUSIE . . . you wouldn't waste any time getting up to the Monroe County SPCA on Wild Animal Farm Road to adopt her. She loves people (especially kids) and is very attentive and eager to learn. She's also partially housebroken. (Staff photo by Brian Heller)

Teachers disdainful of wage challenge

By HARRIET LEEDS
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — The 187 members of the Stroudsburg Area Teachers Assn. will not give up their cost of living increases for next year despite a challenge by the district's eight administrators to do so.

At the board meeting Wednesday, the administration claimed they will work for the same salary they received in 1974-75 if the Stroudsburg Area Teaching Assn. also voluntarily agrees to work for the same salary they received during the 1974-75 school year.

William E. Shearer, president of the teachers association, said Friday of the challenge, "We will not dignify that by making a response."

Shearer continued, "One hundred eighty-seven people will not take a pay cut to appease the administration. They don't have a contract. It's easy to give away what you don't have."

The association president explained without a cost of living increase and with a 13.5 increase in inflation, accepting the same salary as the just-completed school year would be equivalent to accepting a pay cut.

Shearer said he learned from some administrators they did not even know what their own salaries would be next year until they read it in the newspapers. He said instead of a contract, the administrators have a "gentleman's agreement."

A statement from the district administration read:

"The administration has recently been under a great deal of criticism for accepting salary increases of $1,500 and $2,000. When our salaries were published in the newspapers several citizens became enraged at salaries of $20,000 for principals (who, incidentally, are on 12-month, not 9.5-month contracts).

"It is rather unfortunate the press did not see fit to print the names and salaries of every teacher in Stroudsburg for the 1975-76 school year. Had they done so, many more citizens may have been outraged to learn that 23 "professional" staff members of the Stroudsburg Area Teacher's Association will have salaries ranging from $15,000 to $19,450.

"Salary increases already guaranteed to SATA members will range from $950 to $1,500 next year.

"In addition to these salary increases already guaranteed, the teacher's union has a cost of living clause in their contract which permits them to re-negotiate salary raises if the cost of living goes above 8.5 per cent. With this clause there is a good chance teacher salaries could increase an additional 5-6 per cent and salary increases for teachers could soar as high as $2,500."

The cost of living issue is not dead, however.

Shearer revealed a proposal he made to board president Lloyd Manter by telephone late this week to have cost analysis experts from the Pennsylvania State Education Association analyze the school budget.

If the budget is really as tight as the administrators claim, Shearer said, the teachers association would consider making a proposal dealing with the cost of living clause that would result in a cost savings to the district.

Shearer declined to specify the nature of the proposal.

Shearer said the cost analysis experts could look at the budget without the administration's approval but "it would be more beneficial to talk to the people who make up the budget."

"If they are not willing to sit down with us," Shearer continued, "We question if they want to analyze the budget."

The association president said he has not heard from Manter since their original phone conversation. He said Manter had asked him to put the proposal in writing.

Shearer emphasized the teachers are now going into the second year of a contract signed in February or March, 1974.

He said the real issue is not pay raises but the probable $400,000 budget deficit the school board faces by September 1.

The bickering on salary issues has clouded the real problem, Shearer said.

Administration spokesmen could not be reached for comment Friday.

Budget watcher refutes criticism

STROUDSBURG — Bruce Anderson of Beacon Hill Road, East Stroudsburg, chairman of the Community Advisory Committee on Education of the Stroudsburg Area School District Friday refuted criticism leveled against his group by Ramsey School Principal Thomas Santoro.

Santoro criticized the group for giving out inaccurate information in its effort to cut the budget. He said the committee's hasty review of the budget and criticism of the board eroded public confidence in it and the entire school district.

Santoro made these remarks at a board meeting Wednesday. Thursday, the committee met to set future goals and adopt by-laws.

Friday, Anderson conceded the group had spoken after what he termed a "sheer, scant review," but added this point had been made at the time.

"We said it was inadequate and would take at least six months to do the job," Anderson said.

Santoro said since the group's leader criticized the board for spending $26 a pair for sneakers for all athletes when the average expenditure for this item is really $12.99, the advisory group has lost credibility.

Anderson said it was not the figures that were important but the fact that the board was purchasing Adidas brand sneakers — "the Cadillac of sneakers" — when they should be buying "Chevy sneakers."

"It's the attitude of spending big that bothers us," Anderson said.

The advisory committee wants to "get out of the spitball contest on sneakers," Anderson said.

The 18-member committee now plans to form task forces to explore specific topics. It will be recruiting volunteers with specific areas of expertise to improve its "credibility to the board and the administration."

For example, Anderson said he hopes to recruit a retired accountant and an industrial engineer.

The committee recognizes it needs the cooperation of the school board to do its job, and is considering asking the board to appoint its chief fiscal officer to the task force.

The committee is immediately seeking volunteers to replace school district paid chaperones. Interested persons should call Hester Deetz or Beverly Scheller.

STROUDSBURG — Renovations to the Community Building in the First Ward Park have cost $22,150.42 so far and the work is not yet completed.

In addition there are $1,432.13 in bills the county has not yet paid and $1,494 for an alarm system installed to prevent burglaries.

The county decided in February to have workers in the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) do the renovations to save money. The commissioners turned down a $14,990 bid from a contractor to do the work.

A breakdown of the expenses as of Friday shows supplies have cost $7,198. In addition, there is $3,531 for architectural fees for designing the remodeling.

The $1,494 for the alarm system and $200 for sewerage excavations were not anticipated in the original work but a burglary of tools at the work site prompted the security alarm and the sewage pipe repair was necessary after a pipe was broken.

Labor for six workers has amounted to $11,877.77 since work began in February. They are paid by the county which is reimbursed by the federal government under the employment program.

Jeffrey M. Evans, county Recreation and Park coordinator, said he expects the renovations will be completed in about a week. The building is to be used for running park programs during the summer and winter.

Toby douses tree fire

POCONO PINES — Tobyhanna firemen were called again at 7:30 a.m. Friday to a tree fire which they had extinguished the night before.

Lightning struck a tree on Deer Path at Lake Naomi Thursday night and was extinguished by firemen. The fire started again during the night, bringing 10 men and two trucks to the scene.

YOU'LL NEVER WALK ALONE . . . is the message delivered musically to 316 retired teachers by John B. Thomas, first vice-president of the Pennsylvania Society of Retired Teachers, Friday evening at a music festival held at ESSC's Dansbury Commons. The event culminated a week-long get-together for the group.

EAST STROUDSBURG — Thomas Reniers leans forward in his chair, holds his stomach and shakes so hard with laughter he cannot finish the story he began to tell.

"It's a classic," he gasps and hands off to his companion, Martha Wolff, who finishes a tale garnered from years of teaching in a Pittsburgh high school.

One of Miss Wolff's fellow teachers threatened to paddle any child who stuck his head out of the classroom window to watch the passersby. She walked into class one day, saw a figure leaning out the window and swatted him a good one. Miss Wolff says the figure turned out to be a janitor who was taking in the flag.

Reniers and Miss Wolff are both a buoyant 77 and 79 years old respectively, politically involved and bent on dispelling the stereotype that old folks can't have a good time.

The two high school teachers who have worked together for 50 years wait in the lounge of an East Stroudsburg State College dormitory for the other 314 members of the Pennsylvania State Retired Teachers Assn. to return from their tour. The retired teachers are spending their week in the Poconos touring sights, playing bingo, staging talent shows and sleeping in Hawthorne Hall dormitory.

By now Reniers has calmed his laughter to a quiver, but Miss Wolff launches into another tale of how lightning struck her school, blew out all the windows and pierced her with pulverized glass.

"Most people have a wrong idea about us," says Reniers. "They probably think we're old fogies. We have more fun than most people."

Between handshakes with old friends, Reniers tells a story about a fellow teacher who walked into class wearing two neckties and begins to tell an off-color joke about his superintendent.

"I can't tell you what the fellow said to the superintendent," he leans forward and whispers. "Not while she's here," he says, pointing to Miss Wolff and chuckling.

Changing the pace, Reniers says his retirement "has been an experience I don't ever hope to match. I've been from California to New York, Boston, Texas, Denver."

"A lot of our teachers do volunteer work in hospitals," says Miss Wolff. "The reason why we have little senility is few of us sit. These people have become active and remain active. They read books. They go to libraries."

The conversation turns serious when the couple and their friend, John Thomas, a principal for 38 years in Philadelphia, claim teaching just isn't what it used to be.

"If you set up a school with these teachers," says Thomas as he waves his hand toward the retired teachers in the lounge, "you wouldn't have the problems you have now."

No respect now

"We were lucky," says Reniers, "to get out when teachers were respected people. Students and parents gave us cooperation that would be unheard of now. When I look at the people between the ages of 30 and 65, I'm damned proud of the job I've done."

"I think basically the authority has been taken away from the administrators," he says, pointing to U.S. and state supreme court rulings, increasing permissiveness and the erosion of parental support.

Years ago, he continues. "Parents sat down and wrote you a thank you note for some little thing you'd done."

Reniers, president of the retired teachers association, says he is surprised at the political clout retired teachers wield, especially in the fight to increase their pensions.

Reminder to legislator
He tells the story of a retired third grade teacher who sent a letter to a former pupil and state legislator, urging him to support increased pensions.

"She sent him a valentine he gave her when he was in third grade, and on it he wrote, 'I love you.' Miss Wolff interrupts. "He said there was no way he could vote against that legislation."

Six bus loads of retired teachers, mostly women, wander into the lounge after their trip to Dingman's Falls. Earlier in the week, the retirees displayed their arts and crafts, saw films.

The association holds an activity and recreation week at a different state college each year.

"It's just a week of rest and recreation," says 76-year-old Thomas.

Pierson, Quinn top spenders

STROUDSBURG — Most candidates for county office in the May 20 primary election have filed reports of campaign expenses as required by law but there remain some who have not.

The commissioner candidates leading the way in campaign spending were Republicans Jesse Pierson of Stroudsburg and William Quinn of Pocono Lake.

The reports show Pierson received $2,915 in contributions and spent $2,816.09 while Quinn received $2,063.76 and spent that exact amount.

Contributions and expenses for other commissioner candidates were: Paul Nauman, Cresco, none and $338.73; Howard Popkin, Stroudsburg, $265 and $450.50; Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis, East Stroudsburg R.D. 2, $73.05 and $630.06; Arlington Martin, Effort, none and $1,200.08; Stuart Pipher, Tannersville, none and $1,061.02; and Raymond Davies Sr., East Stroudsburg R.D. 4, $159.96 and $471.10.

Other candidates for county office who filed expense statements were: James F. Marsh, district attorney, no contributions and $417 expense; and Robert Besecker, Claude Heller and Mary Emma Teeter Garcia, auditors, under $150 each; Miss Kathryn Bush, register and recorder, under $150; and Frank J. Smith, prothonotary, under $150.

Those county-wide candidates who failed to file within the 30-day deadline were: A. John Dodds, Douglas E. Williams and Brendan V. Higgins, all commissioner candidates; Forrest B. Sebring, sheriff; and Michael Albano, prothonotary candidate.

According to the state Campaign Expense Reporting Law, candidates are not forced to file statements but could be subject to penalties including a jail sentence if they do not.

Candidates who "fail to file an account of primary or election expense . . . shall be guilty of a misdemeanor upon conviction and shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding $1,000 or undergo imprisonment of not less than one month or more than two years or both," according to the law.

Even those candidates who spent less than $150 on campaigning are required to file a notarized statement to that effect.

Blood pressure test today

698 check their tickers

STROUDSBURG — Area residents have from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today to have their blood pressure checked for free at the Rea and Derick Drug Store on North Ninth Street.

Friday 698 people had their blood pressure checked at the store by the Keystone Chapter of the American Heart Association.

The tests are sponsored by a grant from the Greater Delaware Valley Regional Medical Program.

Of the people tested Friday, 172 had over normal pressures and were advised to see their family physician.

Edward Clause of the store said people came into the store specifically to have their pressure checked.

"They came for the clinic. They'd come right in the door and sit right down. I'm very, very pleased with the turnout," he said.

"Sometimes it's really funny, like when a couple comes in and the wife makes the husband sit down," Clause added.

Clause said the people covered all age groups from young people and college athletes to middle aged people and the elderly.

"They've been coming in steadily, but it hasn't been so heavy that the nurses haven't had time to talk with them," he said.

"We've tested some kids from college — I know one guy's on the wrestling team — an expectant mother and teenagers," he added.

Some of the people said they knew about the blood pressure screenings and came to the store just for that while others said they were in the store, saw the tables and decided to stop.

"I came for some stuff for my wife and saw it was free," said Brad Wise, 23, of Tannersville.

Kathy Shenk, 20, of Lancaster, said she knew about the test and came to have her blood pressure checked.

"I don't go to a doctor regularly. I'm a college student. But I haven't been exercising and started again. I was hoping it wasn't high," she said.

"I heard about it on the radio but never thought about it again until we came in," said Thomas Smith, 37, Shyndersville, who added, "If it's for nothing instead of $8 in an office, why not?"

Mrs. Betty Cummings, who is in her late 50s and from Bartonsville, said she knew about the screenings and had hers checked because it was free.

"They had free screenings where I work a month and a half ago, but I forgot it then," she added.

Second round 68 earns three-stroke margin

Watson (135) ties record, leads Open

MEDINAH, Ill. (UPI) — Freckle-faced Tom Watson, who lost a one stroke lead on the field in the final round to lose the U.S. Open a year ago, took precautions to prevent a repeat of history Friday and equalled a record in the process.

He shot his second consecutive sub-par round at Medinah, a three-under par 68, and grabbed a three-stroke lead on his nearest competitor, Ben Crenshaw, another of the golf tour's "young lions," midway through the 72 hole event with a total of 135.

Watson's 137 total equalled the lowest score ever at midpoint of the Open, set by Mike Souchak in 1960 and equalled by Bert Yancey in 1968.

"I have a definite game plan, the way to play this golf course, and I'm going to stick with it," Watson said. "There're not too many holes to gamble on."

The youngsters on the tour were setting the pace with Pat Fitzsimons in third at 140 after a 73 Friday, Terry Hill, Jim Wiechers, and two-time champion Lee Trevino tied for fourth at 141, one under par, and Peter Oosterhuis, Grier Jones and Jack Nicklaus at even par 142.

Arnold Palmer, disappointing his host of followers with a 75 for a 144 total, declared that the heat hurt him when he posted five bogeys in six holes on the first nine to reach the turn four-over par and he stayed that way.

Watson had a steady round, going over par only on the second hole when he three putted. He dropped birdie putts of seven, 10 and twice of 12 feet.

"I putted exceptionally well the last two rounds," he said, "and I'm driving very well. The greens are getting firmer and bumpy too. They're starting to brown out a little bit, starting to die."

Watson revealed that he invoked the "lightning rule" to delay his start because a bolt struck less than a mile from the first tee.

Play was suspended for almost 50 minutes, and Watson sat in the clubhouse, before he went on the course. "P. J. Boatright later apologized to me," he said, speaking of the U.S.G.A. executive director who had asked why he invoked the rule.

"P.J. went out to the first tee, and all of a sudden, zap!" Watson said. "The delay helped. I got to relax a little."

Watson, trying for his third tournament win, said he was "more sure of himself" now than he was a year ago when champion Hale Irwin, Forrest Fezler, Bert Yancey and Lou Graham passed him on the last round of the 1974 Open. "I feel confident of my ability. The pressure is greater in this tournament than in others, but the pressure is there and it's constant.

"Any Open course is hard to catch up on if the leaders make pars, and if you make three or four birdies, you're going to pick up a lot of strokes."

Crenshaw also tallied a 68 to go with his opening day 70 for 138.

"I'm not hitting near as good as I want to," Crenshaw said. "My driving is what bothers me most. The greens are fine, and if I can get on the greens in regulation, I'll be making some birdies."

"I feel very good to be in the position I'm in. If I start to hit the ball a little better, I'll be right in there. Three shots is nothing in an Open, especially with 36 holes to go.

Some former Open champions trailed badly. Orville Moody was at 152 after a 73, and Tony Jacklin at 150 after 74. Johnny Miller had a 72 for 147 and Gary Player a 73 for 148. Irwin was 71 for 145.

Tom Weiskopf recovered from a disgruntled 75 on the first round for a par 71 and 146. Al Geiberger with 72 and John Mahaffey with 71 were at 144, and Sam Snead tallied a 76.

Tigers score 10-9 victory over Yanks

DETROIT (UPI) — Rookie John Wockenfuss' two-run double highlighted a seven-run first inning Friday night and Mickey Stanley added a three-run homer in the seventh that carried the Detroit Tigers to a 10-9 victory over the New York Yankees.

Vern Ruhl, another rookie, gained credit for his sixth victory in nine decisions but needed ninth inning relief help from John Hiller when the Yankees rallied for six runs. The triumph enabled the Tigers to snap a four-game losing streak.

Ruhl, who scattered nine hits, was touched for a pair of homers, a two-run shot by Graig Nettles, his 12th, in the sixth inning and a solo blast by Bobby Bonds, his 16th, in the ninth.

Brewers, 6-0

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Bobby Darwin drove in three runs and Jim Slaton tossed a six-hitter Friday night to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-0 triumph over Cleveland which handed the Indians their 11th defeat in their last 12 games.

Darwin, who joined the Brewers last Saturday in a trade that sent John Briggs to Minnesota, upped his Milwaukee average to .400 by banging out a two-run homer in the first inning and slapping a run-scoring double in the fifth.

Red Sox, 4-3

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Rick Burleson's sacrifice fly in the 12th inning scored Doug Griffin from third base with the winning run Friday night, enabling the Boston Red Sox to stretch their victory streak to six games with a 4-3 decision over the Baltimore Orioles.

Griffin coaxed a one-out walk from losing relief pitcher Dyar Miller and scampered to third base when Juan Beniquez singled to rightfield. Burleson's fly ball to Ken Singleton in right brought in Griffin to make Dick Drago (1-0) the winner in relief.

Twins, 5-3

CHICAGO (UPI) — Steve Brye's first inning three-run homer backed up right-hander Ray Corbin's well-spaced 11-hit pitching Friday night in a 5-3 victory for the Minnesota Twins over the Chicago White Sox.

The victory ended a four-game Twins' losing streak.

White Sox loser Dave Hamilton (1-3), making his first start for Chicago since coming from Oakland June 15, walked Dan Ford and Eric Soderholm in the first before Brye hit his fifth homer of the season into the left field stands.

The Twins added another run in the sixth after Hamilton walked John Briggs. Briggs took second on an infield out, moved to third when Glenn

Fortunate Tom Sneva back rarin' to go racing

LONG POND — One of the most fortunate guys around Pocono International Raceway this week is Tom Sneva, the Penske Team driver involved in a horrible wreck at Indianapolis less than a month ago.

He's fortunate to be alive, let alone eager to race in the June 29 Schaefer 500 race here.

"I definitely feel I'm fortunate to be around," Sneva said Friday during a break in practice for today's time trials. "You couldn't simulate it again no matter what you tried to do. Things just worked out right. The car hit in the right spots and did things at the right times, so I didn't get hurt much at all."

Anyone who has seen films of that wreck marvels at the fact that Sneva is still walking around here with a big Panama hat and sunglasses on. He could have been fitted for a casket.

"The first time we saw films of it it was just like someone else was going through all that commotion," Sneva recalled with a smile. "It didn't seem like it was me."

"Then you realize it was and start realizing how fortunate you really were. The first thought, really, was getting back, getting everything healed up to the point where you can go race some more."

If there has been a dimming in the bright racing star shining over Tom Sneva, it isn't apparent. He still has the urge to get out there and battle, even if the car he is now driving needs more work yet.

"We're feeling pretty good physically," he said. "The only trouble is that we're having trouble getting the car dialed in correctly so it will work well and go fast here, but we're feeling good and ready to go."

His old ride was the car that shattered at Indianapolis, so it obviously will do no more racing. "The bigger teams like us usually have three cars," Sneva said with a laugh, "but now we only have two."

Still, it is not totally foreign to him. "We ran it once in April at Trenton in the World Series of Auto Racing. It worked fairly well there but we haven't hit upon the right combination here yet and we're still looking for it."

Don't get the idea that Sneva jumped right out of the hospital bed into a race car cockpit. It just didn't happen that way.

"We're probably a lot stronger physically than we were then," Sneva stressed, using the third person. "We've been working on the weights and other things to get back in shape. After you lay around a few days you lose it awful fast. But we're feeling real strong and ready to go."

If the heat of the last few days keeps up, and while Raceway officials don't talk about the temperature too much they have to be wishing the sun would stay around and the rain away, driver conditioning will be important.

"Conditioning is a definite factor because you're in the car for three hours and to be able to run as fast the last lap as you do the first you have to be prepared," Sneva explained. "You're fatigued and you can't do it. When you get tired you're a lot more prone to make mistakes out there. You can get yourself and others in trouble."

Keeping cool isn't easy. "You really can't," he said. "The only way to keep cool is to be sweating and with all this stuff on you do a lot of that. You try to keep your body temperature at the right level."

"It'll be a factor but everybody has to cope with it and the guys who are in better shape are able to cope with it better than anyone else."

Tom Sneva used to pick up paychecks as a junior high school principal in Washington State, but he has no thoughts of going back to that safe spot again.

"Not now. We really enjoy racing too much and we'll keep on doing that until we don't enjoy it anymore."

Famed mechanic George Bignotti, who is in charge of taking care of and preparing cars for Gordon Johncock and Wally Dallenbach here and who has been aligned with drivers who have won more 500 mile races than anyone else, feels the speeds in the race for the pole position today will go above the 182 mph recorded by Johncock Thursday and the 182.334 turned in by Bobby Unser Friday.

"Those speeds were a start," he said. "Speeds Saturday will depend a lot on how the track is running, but I think the speed will go up."

Bobby U. won the pole a year ago with an average speed of 182.5 miles-per-hour for the four laps involved in the timing process.

Experience here the past four years has to help in setting up the cars, too, said Bignotti.

"It helps because you know what you've done in the past," he said. "It will be different but you know you have to make some basic changes to keep yourself in the ballpark."

Mike Mosely surpassed the 180 mark Friday with a lap of 180.650, while A.J. Foyt nearly reached 179 without seriously pushing his car.

Practice will be held today from 9 to 11 a.m., with qualifying opening at noon and continuing until 6 p.m., the same schedule prevails for Sunday, but the top speed today takes the pole and the few hundred bucks that go with it. Sunday the final spots in the 33-car field will be filled.

Federal judge gives approval

Penguins can borrow $800,000

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A federal judge Friday gave the Pittsburgh Penguins, currently in receivership, permission to borrow up to $800,000 in an effort to keep the National Hockey League franchise operating here.

Jack Button, Penguins' general manager and court-appointed receiver, asked U.S. District Court Judge Hubert I. Teitelbaum for permission to borrow the money, although he said he did not have any lender lined up.

"I'm hopeful and we've been talking to people, but we don't have anyone specifically yet," Button said after the court session. "What we need is a buyer and soon."

Button said he would pursue all possible sources for the $800,000, but did not know if he would be able to get it.

"I'm standing here now," he shrugged. "I've got about 12 cents in my pocket."

He said the most practical solution for the Penguins' problem would be sale of the club.

Charles Strong, executive director of the Civic Arena, said negotiations for possible sale of the club were being conducted with four prospective purchasers. He refused to identify the possible buyers, but said three of the discussions were initiated by the Arena, home ice for the Penguins.

Results of the negotiations should be known by Monday or Tuesday, Strong said. He also said there were two emergency plans in the works in case the discussions fall through, but he declined to elaborate.

The Penguins' petition said the NHL approved the infusion of new money at its meeting in Montreal earlier in the week.

The money will be used to pay players' contracts, administrative expenses, and Internal Revenue Service claims.

The IRS did not oppose the petition. An IRS spokesman told the judge, "We've got enough problems in Washington without running a hockey team."

Joins team for Six Hours of Endurance July 13

Andretti to run Alfa Romeo at 'Glen'

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — America's Mario Andretti and Italian Grand Prix star Arturo Merzario, along with LeMans winner Derek Bell of England and France's Henri Pescarolo have been nominated to drive a pair of red Alfa Romeo 33TT12 prototype sportscars in the Six Hours of Endurance here July 12.

The twin prototypes will seek to wrap up the World Championship for Manufacturers with a victory here at The Glen. Currently the team, entered by Willi Kaulhsen Racing of Germany, leads the point standings after seven rounds of the ten race series. Alfa has scored 115 points, while Porsche stands in second place with 98 markers.

Entry of the Alfa Romeos, powered by 12 cylinder, three-liter engines, means the Italian cars will accept the challenge of a pair of Renault Alpine prototypes which entered the invitation-only classic endurance test June 15. Renault Alpine will be a formidable foe, bringing two turbocharged cars for South African Grand Prix ace Jody Scheckter and France's Formula One star Patrick Depailler. Driving the second machine will be Gerard Larrousse and Jean-Pierre Jabouille of France.

The Glen's Six Hours is one of only two events in America counting toward the World Manufacturer's Championship. The other event was held at Daytona, Fla., last February. As none of the European teams crossed the Atlantic for the event, Watkins' Six Hours will be the only North American appearance of any of the swift and sleek prototype machines.

Andretti's nomination to drive the Alfa Romeo means two races in as many days for the Pennsylvanian at Watkins Glen. He will also compete in the Sunday Formula 5000 event in a Vicrey Lola T332 entered by the Vel's Parnelli Jones Racing Team. Andretti is the defending Glen Formula 5000 champion and barely missed winning the series title last year, a crown he is determined to win this season.

The former Indianapolis 500 winner and United States Auto Club national champion feels the Alfa's chances of winning at Watkins Glen are good, despite the appearance of the very fast Renault Alpines. "The Alfas are very fast this year, and sometimes faster, but their problem has been reliability. We feel we have a very good chance of taking the victory at Watkins Glen," Andretti said.

Merzario, Andretti's driving partner, is acknowledged as one of the fastest drivers in the world today. He has been a regular team driver for Frank Williams' Grand Prix effort this season, and has been very fast at European circuits with a car which has not been the most competitive piece of machinery.

Bell is one of the most popular drivers to compete at The Glen. Recognized as one of the world's premier endurance sportscar drivers, Bell's victory at LeMans this month while co-driving a Mirage with Jacky Ickx, marked one of the highest points of his career which has included Grand Prix and Formula 5000 drives.

Pescarolo returns to Watkins seeking his second victory in three years in the Six Hours. He shared the winning Matra in 1973 with Gerard Larrousse. Like Bell, Pescarolo is one of the very best endurance drivers of this time, and had been victorious three straight years at LeMans prior to Bell's win this season.

In addition to the European prototypes, the Glen Six Hours field is expected to include the very best North American Porsches, Monzas, Corvettes, Ferraris and BMWs. The Formula 5000 race Sunday will include the likes of Al and Bobby Unser, Brian Redman, Jackie Oliver, David Hobbs and Jerry Karl.

Money saving advance sale tickets for the July Six Hours-Formula 5000 doubleheader weekend are available at all East Coast Ticketron outlets. Special discount "super" tickets are available at Northeast U.S. Volkswagens and Porsche-Audi dealers.

Conigliaro to report to minors

BOSTON (UPI) — Tony Conigliaro cleared waivers Friday afternoon, setting the stage for the Boston Red Sox player's trip to Pawtucket of the International League.

Conigliaro, 30, who has not been in the minor leagues since jumping from Wellesville in Class A in 1963 to the Red Sox the following spring, was released by Boston a week ago. He had tried to make his own deal with another major league club but no one took his offer.

"I will report to Pawtucket Monday or Tuesday," Conigliaro said Friday night.

"It's an opportunity for me to play every day," he said. "I still believe that I can play in the majors and this is my chance to prove it."

Ahern fires opening 67 for Hoosier Classic lead

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (UPI) — Kathy Ahern fired a five-under par 67 Friday to take the first-round lead in the LPGA Hoosier Classic, one shot ahead of Marlene Hagge and two strokes better than four other golfers.

Defending champion Joanne Carner was among nine players tied at even par-72.

Miss Ahern, playing the back nine first, carded a four-under par 32, posting birdies on 10, 12, 15 and 17. Her birdie at 17 came on a 20-foot chip shot that found the hole.

She came back to register a 35 on the front side, getting a birdie on only No. 8 but putting well enough to post pars on the other holes. She missed only one green as she put together the day's best round over the Plymouth Country Club's 6,077-yard course in the $43,000 tourney.

Miss Hagge carded a four-under-par 68, playing even on the front side after playing the back nine first in four under 32, collecting five birdies and one bogey.

Miss Carner hit 16 greens but had putter trouble, shooting a 35-37 for her even-par 72 total.

Deadlocked at 69 were Debbie Austin, Echo Nakamura, Kathy Whitworth and Mary Cushing.

Kathy Postlewaite and Beth Solomon were knotted at 70. Betsy Cullen, Judy Rankin, Kathy Cornelius and amateur Cookie English were tied at 71.

Tied with the defending champion at 72 were Pam Higgins, Susie McAllister, Judy Meister, Diane Patterson, Jan Stephenson, Beth Stone, Bonnie Bryant and Jo Ann Prentice.

The 54-hole tourney continues through Sunday, and the forecast is for more hot, humid weather. A number of players were bothered by the 90-degree weather Friday, including Miss Hagge who said she felt shaky toward the end of the day.

Miss Ahern said she didn't get mad in the hot weather. "I just hit it (the ball)," she said.

Thompson inking sought by Hawks

ATLANTA (UPI) — David Thompson had not been signed and the Atlanta Hawks had not been sold Friday, but Hawks' officials were working on both goals.

A spokesman for the Hawks said a meeting involving present owner Tom Cousins, coach Cotton Fitzsimmons and possibly team president John Wilcox with Thompson's agent was being set up. He said no specific time for such a meeting had been worked out and that it might not take place during the weekend but that it would be soon.

Thompson, picked by the Hawks as the No. 1 draft choice in the National Basketball Association, was reported to have said that he was tired of waiting and would like to have a contract signed by no later than Monday. The 6-4 forward will cost the team that signs him between $3 million and $4 million over the duration of a long-term contract.

Thompson also was drafted by the Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association and Jack Ankerson, the general manager of that team, said that the North Carolina State star's demands were so high that if the Squires signed him, they might be unable to sign any other draft choices.

It is expected that the Squires will make a trade with the Denver Nuggets for rights to Thompson. Earlier this week, Denver signed Marvin "The Human Eraser" Webster of Morgan State, who also had been picked in the first round by the Hawks.

Simon Selig, Jr. said Friday morning that he was optimistic that a deal would be completed soon for his family to purchase a majority interest in the Hawks.

"I would say it can be completed within a very few days," Selig said.

Golf's the game

By Joe Miegoc, Record Sports Editor

Mountain Manor Golf Club in Marshalls Creek will hold its annual men's member-guest tournament Sunday at the club.

Tee-off time for the tournament is 8 a.m.

Speaking of tournaments, Evergreen Park in Analomink will also be staging one Sunday.

The club will be holding a "members get acquainted tournament," with an 8 a.m. tee-off time for the best-ball-of-partners tourney. Prizes will be awarded for low scores in both the gross and net categories.

The husband of a former Stroudsburg resident has been named head golf professional at Amelia Island Plantation in Florida, 35 miles northeast of Jacksonville.

Robert Tompkins, husband of the former Mary Lou Hardenshine of Stroudsburg, has been named to head the Plantation's 27-hole golf operation designed by Peter Dye. Tompkins previously served at the Ponte Vedra Club in Ponte Vedra, Florida, in 1969, and then served as a golf pro at Pittsburgh Field in Pittsburgh for three years before accepting the Amelia Plantation position.

In answer to a question, there are three other tournaments and possibly a fourth within driving distance for area golfers who want to see the pros in action.

The Westchester Classic in August in Harrison, N.Y., and the B.C. Open over Labor Day weekend in Endicott, N.Y. are two men's tournaments within two and one-half hours drive of the Poconos, with the PGA at Firestone in Akron, Ohio in August also not that far for those gung-ho fans.

For the women, the George Washington Classic will be held next month at Hidden Springs Country Club in Hershams, near Willow Grove and less than two hours away.

Phil Rizzulo, one of the greatest shortstops in baseball history and currently the voice of the New York Yankees, will host the first annual "Yankee Greats" golf tournament July 7, 8 and 9 at Shawnee Inn and Country Club.

Rizzulo, one of the mainstays of the legendary Yankee teams of the 1940s and 1950s, will lead a contingent of former Yankees as well as other celebrity athletes in the three-day tournament.

The tournament is open to the public and a special three-day program has been arranged for participants. In addition to golf, special activities have been planned for the wives of the golfers as well as a social schedule involving cocktail parties and dinner.

Reservations for the tournament may be arranged by calling Shawnee at 421-1500.

The Lords Valley Country Club Women's Assn. held their kickoff luncheon recently and after president Mary Jane Nappin welcomed the group, golf chairman Annamaria Caccese announced the first tournament for the 18 hole players will be held Thursday with a shotgun start at 8:15 a.m. and a luncheon to follow.

Treasurer Jean Livermore advises there is a July 1 deadline for new players to enter the group. Kay Atwill listed opportunities for members to play at other clubs and Ruthie McKay, handicap tournament chairman, announced the beginning of that tourney July 7.

Joanne Blum, tennis committee representative, announced the schedule for tennis this year will be the same as last and will be under the direction of a new pro, Morya Cunningham and Fran Wilkens are the co-chairmen of the nine-hole players.

A fashion show featuring sports clothes from the club's pro shop modeled by club members followed the luncheon.

Coaches' glitter game to open grid season

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — The seven-month long football season — yes, football — opens tonight with an all-star game featuring 60 of last year's top college seniors.

The Coaches All-America game kicks off the lengthy season at 8 p.m. (CDT) with a capacity crowd at Texas Tech's Jones Stadium expected along with a national television audience.

"We have some awfully good talent," said Steve Sloan, the new coach at Texas Tech and leader of the East squad. "I hope we put on a good show. I would like to see a close ball game."

Close ball games have been commonplace in this series, but last year the West ran away with a 36-6 triumph that gave the West an 8-6 lead in games.

"We know what we have to do and what we can do," said Sloan, who left Vanderbilt for the job at Texas Tech. "We won't know whether we will have a balanced attack. We would like to, of course, but sometimes the game dictates you not have a balanced attack."

Sloan will have Fred Solomon of Tampa and Mike Frankowiak of NCAA Division 2 champion Central Michigan as his signal callers and, at least to start the game, the running backs will be Stan Fritts of North Carolina State and Louis Carter of Miami.

Both Frankowiak and Carter are draft choices of the Denver Broncos, a team that will have six of its rookie prospects on display.

If you're hard to fit and want a Quality Hiker, this is it.

GOLF WINNER — John Ferrebee (right) of Buck Hill receives the first annual Fred Waring golf trophy from Waring after posting the best low gross men's score in the "Take a Swing at Arthritis" Golf Tournament at Shawnee Inn.

Arthritis tournaments net $1,200

First Waring trophies awarded

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE — John Ferrebee of Buck Hill and Betty Ahnert of Bushkill are the first winners of the Fred Waring golf trophies.

Ferrebee fired a 68 to take men's low gross honors in the "Take a Swing at Arthritis" golf tournament at Shawnee Inn while Ahnert was the top women's low gross player with an 87.

Judy Siglin of Paradise Valley won the Virginia Waring tennis trophy.

The Waring trophies will be on permanent display at Shawnee Inn and each year the annual tournament winners' names will be added.

This year's winners each received an engraved pewter and glass tray.

A total of 122 golfers, twice as many as played last year, competed in the second annual golf competition. A total of 43 tennis players participated in round robin play at East Stroudsburg State College.

Unofficial tabulations showed that $1,200 was netted by the twin events for the Monroe County Unit of the Arthritis Foundation.

Rich Millard, Charles Motson, and Bill Nixon were other winners in men's low gross. Bert Diehl, Laura Evans, Marion Scott, and LaVerne

William Z. Scott, Joe Maday, Lester Abelloff, Walter Sherman, Jules Steinberg, and Tom Foley were the top players in men's handicap.

Loretta Hummel, Jennie Shoemith, Arlene DeRo, Elsie Flaccento, Mora Meyung, and Edna Ehrgood were the top ladies' handicap golfers.

In the special awards category, Anne Olson won the early bird award, Stanley Grace came closest to the pin, and Randy Neff took longest drive honors for the men, while Marion Williams was credited for the longest drive for the women.

Tennis tournament winners were Alice Fessick, Charlotte Andersen, Bernice Levin, Pat Kennedy, Bonnie Ahnert, Marilyn Hertz, Migsey Wyckoff, Pat Woodhead, Peggy Galoway, and Dee Burke.

Carol Creamer was in charge of the tennis tournament, while Dee Christine, local Arthritis Unit president, and 1975 fund raising chairman Bill Blackburn guided the golfing event.

Working with them on the twin tournaments were Betty Patterson, Marianne Higgins, Marion Scott, Judy Berry, Bess Trumbour, and Bill Nixon.

Ruffian seeks to wrap up fillies' triple crown today

NEW YORK (UPI) — A surprisingly large number of eight 3-year-old fillies is scheduled to challenge Locust Hill Farm's remarkable Ruffian today in the 59th running of the Coaching Club American Oaks at Belmont Park.

The $100,000-added third leg of New York's Filly Triple Crown is expected to be as much of a Ruffian runaway as the first two, the Acorn and the Mother Goose.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Janney's coal black filly has won all nine of her starts, most by embarrassing margins, and Ruffian, who is scheduled to meet Kentucky Derby winner Foolish Pleasure in a $350,000 match race at Belmont Park July 6, is expected to go off at 1-10 with another large minus show pool in store for Belmont Park and Off-Track Betting.

Only three other fillies have won the Fillies' Triple Crown since it was inaugurated in 1961: Chris Evert last year, Shuvee in 1969 and Dark Mirage in 1968.

The Oaks is contested over the entire route of Belmont Park's 1½-mile strip and will be Ruffian's first try at such a distance. But the Acorn was her first go at a mile and she won that by slightly more than eight lengths. The Mother Goose was the Reviewer-Shenanigans filly's first crack at 1½-mile and at negotiating two turns, and she won that by 13 lengths.

Trained by Frank Whiteley,

Jr., and ridden by Jacinto Vasquez, Ruffian has so completely overwhelmed the current crop of fillies that Belmont Park and the CBS television network, which will televise the Oaks, sprung for the match race with Foolish Pleasure, confident she would make the Oaks her 10th in a row.

Vasquez, who also rides Foolish Pleasure, has chosen to go with Ruffian in the match race.

Sarsar, who looms as Ruffian's chief challenger among the fillies, probably will be scratched from the field by post time as she is trained by David Whiteley, Frank's son, and the two have been avoiding a head-to-head battle.

NCAA seeking rejection of sex discrimination ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association urged Congress Friday to reject a proposed ban on sex discrimination in federally employed entrepreneurs.

Testifying before the House Education and Labor Committee, Dr. John Fuzak said the NCAA fears the regulations would have a devastating impact on revenue-producing college football and basketball programs.

If the regulations are not rejected, he said, the NCAA wants a full study of their impact, a position advocated earlier this week by college coaches.

Fuzak said the regulations, drawn by HEW, are designed to destroy major college football and basketball programs by mandating the use of revenue-producing sports to equally support all athletic programs for men and women.

If the regulations take effect, he urged Congress to allow the revenue from football and basketball to first be used to keep those programs going. Then, the remaining funds could be equally divided between the minor sports for both men and women.

Fuzak and the NCAA legal counsel said in their opinion, the regulations should not apply to the major sports at all since they receive no direct federal funding. But they agreed athletic programs do receive indirect federal support and benefit from federal funds applied to other aspects of a university.

Questioned on the need to upgrade women's athletic programs, Fuzak denied sex discrimination is the reason women's programs have been downgraded.

"The present state of women's varsity athletics is not at that state because of discriminatory practices," he said, adding that only in recent years have women been interested in participating.

Until five or six years ago, he said, women preferred "play days" instead of varsity competition.

"They believed that intense competition was harmful," Fuzak said.

He said it would not be "appropriate" to expect women's varsity athletics to be up to the same levels of men's programs in only five years.

Fuzak disputed contentions that women get only 2 per cent of the total athletic budget and said if football and basketball were eliminated from the figures "you wouldn't find much disparity" on what is spent for sports.

"It is inappropriate to judge fairness in terms of dollars spent," Fuzak said.

Dr. Jean Simmons, president of the Federation of Organizations for Professional Women, disagreed and said systematic sex discrimination is pervasive throughout the higher education system.

When Congress mandated equal opportunities for all, she said, "it did not say this law will take effect only if convenient, only if it does not hurt anyone's revenues or only if it does not rock the boat."

"We must especially do not need delays...to determine the impact of equal opportunity on college sports revenues."

Roche surprises Tanner; King crushes Morozova

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — Tony Roche, who "retired" two years ago after a long series of injuries, forced himself into the Wimbledon reckoning Friday by reaching the final of the $108,000 John Player tournament.

The 30-year-old Australian carved out a 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 victory over American Roscoe Tanner, who eliminated Wimbledon champion Jimmy Connors Thursday.

Roche, playing his first singles tournament since an Achilles tendon operation in January, was sharp and aggressive against his 23-year-old opponent from Lookout Mountain, Tenn.

The American's bristling serve was always a problem to Roche, although he broke it in the first game of the match. That was enough to win the set and he repeated the dose in the sixth game of the final set to win the match.

Roche, who meets Dutchman Tom Okker for the $18,000 first prize today, spoke later about his Wimbledon prospects. "I had given up all hope of being any sort of challenge at Wimbledon this year. I retired from the game during Wimbledon 1973 because of an injury and by chance I stopped off in the Philippines where my elbow trouble was righted by a faith healer. Its only by chance, too, that I am here at all. I decided to play with John Newcombe in the doubles and when he pulled out because of injury I had every intention of pulling out too, but by then I was paired up in the mixed with Billie Jean King, so I decided to play."

Billie Jean raced through, 6-4, 6-1, to gain the finals against Britain's Virginia Wade today.

Miss Wade, seeded sixth for Wimbledon, prevented an all-American final by edging Rosie Casals, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

AAU okays mini-team

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Amateur Athletic Union softened the blow of a canceled track meet with Russia Friday with the replacement of a "mini" team that will compete in a series of events in Europe prior to a triangular match with Poland and Czechoslovakia in Prague, July 7-8.

The men's team, coached by Ted Hayden of Chicago, will be drawn from athletes competing at Eugene, Ore., this weekend. One man in each event forms the United States' roster for the European trip. The squad preps for the Prague meet with the World Games at Helsinki, Finland, June 25-26, a June 30-July 1 meet in Stockholm and a July 4 showup at the Chrystal Palace in London.

The women's AAU championships in White Plains, N.Y., next weekend will provide a 14-member team that visits Oslo, Norway, for the July 3-4 Bizlet Games and then joins the men's group in Czechoslovakia. Jack Griffin of Frederick, Md., is coach of the women's squad.

Upon their return, the 34 track athletes become part of a U.S. team that meets West Germany and Pan-Africa squads in Durham, N.C. July 18-19.

The AAU canceled a scheduled Kiev July 4-5 dual meet with Russia earlier this week when it claimed the Soviets had violated a television contract that would have financed the American squad.

Despite Russia admitting it was to blame for the contract violation, the AAU refused to rescind its decision to cancel the meet.

FOOD CRISIS — ABC News looks at America's position as the world's major food supplier, exemplified in the mechanized harvest of wheat in the state of Washington (left), as part of the investigative report, "ABC News Closeup on The Food Crisis: A Matter of Policy," airing Friday, (10:00 - 11:00 P.M.) on the ABC Television Network. Correspondent Peter Jennings, filmed climbing a grain-filled boxcar in Iowa (center), reports on the impact of government policy on high food prices in the United States and food shortages in poor countries such as India (photo at right).

New cancer control approach

An exciting new approach to the control of cancer is being tried at Stanford University in California. Tiny atomic particles, called "pions," when shot at tumor cells kill them.

The pions enter the cancer cells and produce a tiny explosion which disintegrates the cancer cells and prevents their recurrence.

Dr. Malcolm Bagshaw and his colleagues state that pion therapy should be available to humans in three to five years. It is expected to be three times as effective in killing tumor cells as X-ray treatments now in use.

The experimental studies are confined to animals but hold great promise.

Almost every year, new methods of treatment become available for asthma.

Dr. Robert Webb, of the Mason Clinic in Seattle, has been using an experimental drug that had attracted wide interest in Great Britain.

The drug, "beclomethasone," in active use in England for the past five years, seems to have few side effects. In addition, the value of the drug was based on the fact that cortisone used in some asthmatic patients could be withdrawn.

The drug has not been released in America by the Food and Drug Administration. When this work is completely substantiated, it will be in general use by doctors in America for some types of asthma.

Life expectancy continues to increase in the United States. It is expected that, within two generations, there may be a marked increase in the number of people who live to be more than 100.

In the United States, there now are six times as many people past 65 than there were at the turn of the century.

With the gift of added years, there must come social advances that will increase the quality of living.

The captain and the first mate of modern super-tankers are amazingly capable at handling medical problems, and even some surgical problems that may arise on the ship.

Now, an interesting ship-to-shore method has been installed in an Israeli shipping line. It is possible to make an electro-cardiogram on board ship and telephone it by radio to the Rambam Hospital in Haifa.

Abnormal tracings of the heart can thus be immediately recognized by heart specialists. They, in turn, radio back specific instructions for the handling of heart emergencies.

This device may yet be used to transmit electrocardiograms from all ships to specified stations, so that no ship will be out of contact with emergency heart care.

'Mannix' Connors hero to nation's Armenians

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — The stars visited Fresno this week to celebrate an exceedingly rare Hollywood phenomenon, a silver wedding anniversary.

The surprise party honored Mike (Mannix) Connors and his wife, Mary Lou. In addition to a lengthy and happy marriage, the Connors enjoy more friends than any couple in Hollywood.

They were married when they were youngsters and Mike's chief claim to fame was the fact that he starred on the UCLA basketball team.

The trip to Fresno was a homecoming for the handsome star. Mike is a native of the burgeoning city in the rich San Joaquin Valley where grapes, cotton and other crops flourish.

The city is populated by more Armenians than can be found anywhere outside of Armenia. And in that regard Connors is something of a legend.

His real name is Krekor Ohanian. And Mike has always been proud of his heritage. Many stars with ethnic backgrounds disguise their origins. Connors boasts of his.

His father was a distinguished lawyer in Fresno. Mike manages to squeeze in at least one "Mannix" episode a year in which Armenians play a conspicuous part.

He speaks the language. And after each show in which Armenians played a part he receives sacks of mail from Armenians around the country.

Mike is to the nation's Armenians what Sinatra is to its Italians.

Hosts of the spectacular party were Mike's attorney brother-in-law and sister, Leo and Dorothy Kolligian, who secretly invited more than a dozen of the Connors' Hollywood friends to join 200 Fresnoans for the celebration.

They arrived in Fresno, some 200 miles north of Hollywood, by plane and automobile to toast the happy couple and their children, Gunnar, 16, and Dana, 14.

The Kolligians surpassed the hosts of Beverly Hills and Bel Air, transforming their manicured gardens into what could have passed for a movie set — sprays of red roses, soft indirect lighting and romantic music.

Comedian Marty Allen took over after a steak and champagne dinner, greeting the visitors. "Welcome to Armenian night in Fresno."

"Every night is Armenian night in Fresno," he was reminded.

The orchestra played the anniversary waltz while Mike and Mary Lou danced alone. In Hollywood it might have been corny. In Fresno it was touching and just right.

Then a belly dancer came on — and so did Marty Allen who shed his tuxedo jacket and proceeded to bring down the house.

Mike took the floor and introduced actor Peter Graves, a distinguished Fresno judge and an attorney friend. They took over the orchestra with Connors on trumpet, Graves on clarinet, the judge on drums and the attorney on piano.

Graves was the star of the quartet although the good jurist ran amok on the drums. Connors trumpet playing sounded like the last gasps of Gunga Din.

Steve Forrest, David Hedison, Tige Andrews, Bob Donner and other Hollywood performers danced with the local ladies.

Forrest, Andrews and Mike took turns singing with the orchestra until a couple of hours before dawn.

It was a party the Hollywood contingent enjoyed as much or more than the Fresnoans. They agreed it was good to find themselves among real people.

Bit Parts: Barbara Eden will star in "You've Come a Long Way, Lady," a 90-minute documentary on womens sports . . . Charlotte Rampling will costar with Peter O'Toole in "Foxrot" . . . David Niven will host a new half-hour television series titled "David Niven's World."

Fred Waring celebrated his 75th birthday and 60th showbiz year at his Delaware Water Gap layout; his first 1915 band was "The Waring-McClintock Snap Orchestra" and drummer Poley McC. still is parading along . . . Fred was a radio-era household name in

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — An auspicious period. If you cooperate smartly, you should not only accomplish much but break through any barriers to new attainment.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — If pleasure-bent, shun risks, unwise involvements. If busy at work, follow a system that will not overtax you. Easy does it — in all things!

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Mixed influences. Plan to clear up any confusing situations. Security must be built on a solid foundation — not on shifting sands.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Better-than-average aspects but, in general, you will fare better at routine activities than in starting new ventures. Watch the budget!

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Once you have made a decision, back it up with vigorous action. You may run into some opposition, but you can counteract with reason and logic.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Personal relationships under some restrictions. Keep private matters separate from business activities and you will be less bothered by dispute, turmoil.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Ignore rumors and correct misunderstandings wherever you can. But remember that the more quietly you handle such matters the more successful will be your efforts.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — Take a close look at factors which influence your decisions. Try to build a sturdier platform from which to launch a more successful assault on your objectives.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Avoid present tendencies toward recklessness and extravagance. You could regret such actions later. Shun haste and impulsiveness, too.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — You may need a little extra push to put over pet projects now but, with your know-how and good judgment, you should be able to overcome minor obstacles.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — If considering a new proposition, study carefully, regardless of who wishes to hurry things through. View offerings with an eye to the future.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Slow down to gather forces more compactly, to conduct activities more adroitly. Don't deviate from preplanned activities for no good reason, however.

YOU BORN TODAY are clever, original and sensitive; endowed with a fine mind and a lively imagination. Travel has great appeal for you and you could succeed in any field which takes you afar but, if you choose to limit your journeys to pleasurable ends, your choice of careers is almost limitless, since your versatility is outstanding. The theater would be an excellent outlet for your talents and in this area you could shine as actor, director, playwright or critic. Other fields in which you could excel: literature, the law, journalism, architecture. Birthdate of: Jean Paul Sartre, French author, playwright.

Mississippi official out to 'ruin' image

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Gov. Bill Waller has launched a campaign to ruin Mississippi's image and the state has forked over $800,000 to see that he succeeds.

The state is using magazine, newspaper, television and personal contact advertising to enhance the state's tourist trade and industrial outlook and to reshape its image.

The campaign, titled "Re-Think Mississippi," features a variety of full-page advertisements in such publications as National Geographic, Southern Living, Field & Stream, House and Garden, Sports Illustrated and Readers Digest.

One advertisement pictures the governor leaning against a black leather chair and proclaiming, "We're out to ruin our image."

Waller said in an interview he has been overwhelmed by the response to the image-changing campaign, which is being handled by advertising agencies in Jackson and Dallas for $800,000 annually.

He said Mississippi's image in the past has been "an indefinable negative. Unfortunately, Mississippi has been compared with backward people or a backward state, I suppose, for 50 years."

"We're out to destroy that image and we're out to correct it."

"This whole promotional program has been geared to shock a citizen into an awareness of change in Mississippi so that he will lose his image in his own mind of our state."

"Underlying that is the hope that more and more citizens nationally would stop in Mississippi on their vacation, to plan national conventions here."

Dr. Robert L. Robinson, executive director of the Agricultural and Industrial Board, said an advertising agency did extensive research before deciding on the placement of advertising in regional issues of various magazines and on television stations in selected cities in Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee, Louisiana and Texas.

"I felt that if we could take a first class approach that we would get a very good payoff on our advertising dollar," Robinson said. "But I underestimated how effective this program would be. It has exceeded all our expectations."

An A&I Board spokesman said the agency has received almost 12,000 replies from magazine and newspaper readers requesting further information on vacation and industrial opportunities in Mississippi.

Among the advertisements is one proclaiming the state a "winter wonderland" where "summer weather has a habit of hanging around all year."

Persons in Washington, Houston, New Orleans and other cities at travel and industry expositions.

The $30,000 display has one segment extolling the state's historical and recreational attractions and another aimed at businessmen hunting industrial sites.

The industrial presentation points out the low average wages in Mississippi and says 75 per cent of the state's revenue comes from the sales, personal income and gasoline taxes while only 4 per cent is derived from corporate income taxes.

It says that industries are generally exempted from all ad valorem taxes for 10 years and may be financed with tax-exempt bonds.

Old Glory new decor for house

DE KALB, III. (UPI) — With just $9.50 and a little help from his friends, Jon Beasley brought the Bicentennial to his household in all its red, white and blue glory—much to his parents' surprise.

Ken Beasley, father of 20-year-old Jon, said he and his wife and two of their four children pulled into the driveway on Saturday, Flag Day, after a nine-hour drive from a vacation in Kentucky.

They looked agast at what used to be their "dirty yellow" house.

It was now red and white striped and had a blue square background in the upper left hand corner, complete with 13 stars encircling a second-floor bedroom window.

"We left instructions for him to paint the house mellow olive," said Beasley, who is an assistant to the president of Northern Illinois University.

"After that nine-hour drive, we were suddenly rejuvenated by the sight of the flag. My wife was quite upset and jumped out of the car saying, 'Oh no, Jon, you didn't!'"

"I just leaned over the steering wheel and started laughing."

Jon and several friends, working mostly at night for three days to combat daytime rains, finished the job just five hours before the family arrived home.

Jon made sure that each of the 13 stars was geometrically equal, even to the point of boarding up the window of a younger brother's bedroom.

"Our younger son's a little upset about it," Mrs. Beasley said, "but Jon says he can have his fan."

Historical heritage

NUERNBERG, Germany (UPI) — Ten historical West German cities have formed a new tourist promotion board to be known as the "Romantic Germany Ten."

A spokesman said the board would not only try to attract more tourists but also seek state and federal help to restore and maintain old castles and monuments that form part of the country's historical heritage.

The 10 cities are: Augsburg, Bonn, Bremen, Freiburg, Heidelberg, Liebeck, Muenster, Nuernberg, Trier and Wuerzburg.

Ford more confident about 1976

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford is becoming more confident he will be elected to the White House in 1976. There are reasons for his optimism.

The President's friends at the White House do not bother to cite public opinion polls which show a steady rise for his popularity.

Terrible after he pardoned former President Nixon in September, the polls after the Mayaguez incident show him the people's choice over such Democrats as George Wallace, Henry Jackson and even Edward Kennedy.

The Kennedy matter is of special interest. The Massachusetts Democratic senator, scion to his family's political fortunes, had been the bogeyman in Ford White House political nightmares. The Kennedy name has been that to Republican White House hopefuls since 1960.

Now that the polls show Ford over Kennedy, who is to worry?

Trouble could come to Ford from other directions or even from Kennedy. But it hasn't come out of the box yet.

Certainly, Ford's White House strategists believe former California governor Ronald Reagan and his friends are doing all they can to reap the GOP nomination for Reagan.

But the counter-Reagan attitude seems to be more believing that they have the situation in control and they must not let any Reagan band wagon come rolling around an unexpected corner.

The very nonurgency of the tempo of Ford's political campaign building for 1976 shows the confidence in the President's camp of taking the nomination with little more than a comparative request. It seems Ford's strategists are more concerned with the Democrats whom the President must face in November 1976 than with the Republicans he will meet in convention next summer.

From the Ford White House the view seems to be that the Democrats are doing a dandy job of tearing themselves apart instead of swinging behind a single candidate who could well use a year of image building with which to face Ford in the November 1976 polling.

This lack of a single Democratic contender not only tends to enhance the cloud of Alabama Gov. George Wallace within the Democratic party but also — partly because Wallace is not judged a national winner either by the White House nor his fellow Democrats — makes the future seem even rosier to Ford.

Some of his friends believe that his fate next year is more dependent on not persons but on such forces as how the economy will be faring when the voters go to the ballot boxes. If the economy holds its own, there's clear sailing. But if there is unemployment and attendant problems, then woe to Ford's White House.

Ford is keeping his option open. Because trouble may come either through the economy or an unlikely but conceivable unity among the Democrats, Ford is not committing himself in such matters as picking absolutely a vice presidential running mate. Too bad for Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller.

If conditions develop requiring Ford to placate the right wing of his party, Rockefeller may be gently shoved overboard. If there is need for Ford to strengthen his standing among northern voters, then he may wrap his arms around his vice president as a running mate next year.

For the moment, Ford prefers to do the classic president-seeking-election bit, publicly attending to his White House work without engaging in direct partisan political warfare. In other words, Ford may be able to make more voter points by battling the energy crisis, unemployment and Middle East troubles than by getting into the arena with Jackson, Kennedy, Wallace, etc., etc., etc.

The President will be trotting about the country in the coming months appearing at "town meeting" type sessions in which he will publicly discuss problems of the day with the voters.

He will never, never, never stoop to mention the name of Wallace, Kennedy, Jackson, etc., etc., etc.

Visitor learns of Learn family history at mansion

By JOE RATTMAN

Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — "I just discovered that one of my ancestors was hanged for murder," exclaimed Paul C. Learn. He sat at an antique desk in the Stroud Community House peering into old volumes of the Pennsylvania archives.

Learn was excited. It was his fifth trip to Stroudsburg to research the lives of his ancestors. Previously, he found details of the "Lerne massacre" in documents preserved at the Community House by the Monroe County Historical Society.

The records did not disclose the circumstances of the murder. Learn said he will return to Stroudsburg to seek the history of his family, who farmed at what is now Tannersville during the era of the American Revolution.

One of several

Learn is one of several amateur historians who, along with professionals, use the materials of the historical society on Tuesdays from 1 to 4 p.m. The documents are part of a public museum maintained by the historical society in several first floor rooms of the Community House.

The building, also known as the Stroud Mansion, is located at Ninth and Main Streets in Stroudsburg. It was constructed in 1795 by Jacob Stroud, who founded the community.

When an uncle of Learn's passed the story of an Indian massacre of their family to him, a story that was told word of mouth through five generations, Learn was highly interested and decided to research his family's history.

"The Lernes are very middle class, good solid citizens, except this Charlie Workeiser who got hanged," Learn said.

"This guy Workeiser is a distant relative of mine," Learn said. "My grandfather was named Workeiser."

"What I'm doing points up the danger of going too deeply into your ancestry," Learn said. He is magazine editor of the Atlantic City Press.

Bicentennial fever

Mrs. Horace Walters, curator of the museum, said historical materials are being used more heavily than usual now because several family and regional histories are being prepared for the nation's bicentennial.

The geneological studies, such as Learn's, are typical projects. A college student is researching the weather history of the Poconos.

By searching through the records, Learn found that five of his ancestors were killed during an Indian attack on their farm but that the lives of two sons were spared because they were out working in the fields at the time.

The boys went to Jacob Stroud to report the attack and to seek help, Learn said. Stroud reluctantly organized a posse to pursue the Indians, Learn said, but the search party took along whiskey.

"They made a drunken party out of the whole thing," Learn said, so the Lerne boys (as their name was spelled then) abandoned the posse in disgust.

Led to feud

The boys found two Indians, whom they killed, hung upside down from a tree limb and mutilated, Learn said. Part of the outcome was a family feud between the Lernes and the Strouds, Learn said.

The massacre occurred July 1781 during the closing months of the American Revolution. Col. Stroud accused the Lernes of being Tories, sympathizers of the British, Learn said.

Outraged by the accusation since relatives fought with the American revolutionaries, the Lernes brought a libel suit against Stroud but lost the case, Learn said. Every detail of the story is documented in the Pennsylvania archives, Learn said.

Learn has visited the Tannersville farm site and distant relative Dale H. Learn, East Stroudsburg R.D. 2, who has a Revolutionary War era musket that belonged to John Learn, the family head that was killed in the Indian attack on the Tannersville farm.

"These archives are filled with blood, mostly Indian blood," Learn said. Later in the summer, Learn will spend his vacation continuing his research, he said.

Much material

The documents used by Learn and others are only a small part of the holdings of the historical society museum. The materials may be used in the community house only. The museum is open Tuesday afternoon or by appointment.

Displays include large collections of Indian artifacts, maps, furniture, china and relics of early Monroe County history, including possessions and oil paintings of some of the earliest settlers of the area.

One of the oldest items displayed is a waistcoat owned by Capt. Daniel Brodhead in 1664 when New Amsterdam was captured by the British from the Dutch. Antique enthusiasts would find the articles displayed very interesting.

The architecture of the building is colonial. Each of the principal rooms has a fireplace. The ceilings are high and the doors and windows are large. Wooden pegs hold the wooden beams of the building's frame together.

Man-made lake gives feel of seacoast to Poconos

PAUPACK — A giant lake filled Wallenpaupack Valley in prehistoric times but water drained from the basin and Wallenpaupack Creek, with rapids and quiet pools, wound through the valley until Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. (PP&L) dammed the creek in 1925.

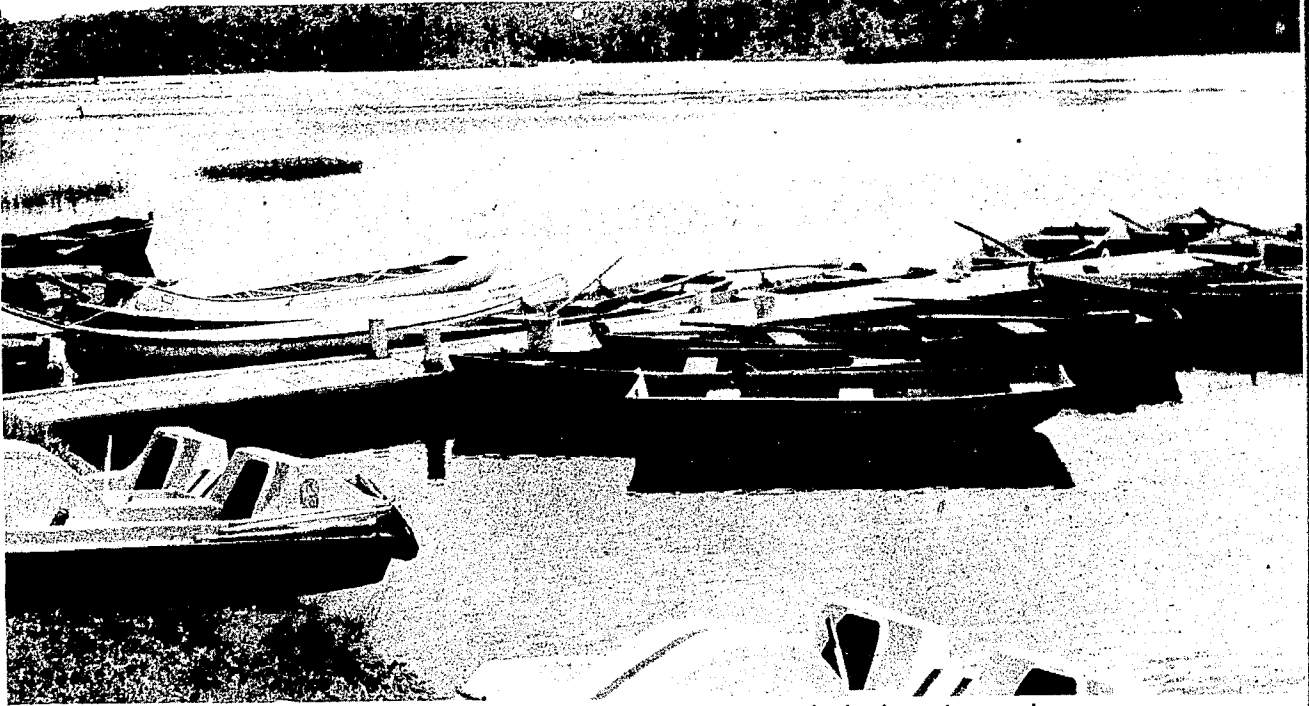

Thirteen-mile-long Lake Wallenpaupack was created and three years later the power company built four recreation areas on the shore of the lake. The lake, built to provide water storage for a hydroelectric power plant, became a center for water recreation in Pennsylvania.

Over the years, the company added facilities to accommodate thousands of campers, picnickers, boaters, fishermen and sightseers. The area, on the northern fringe of the Poconos, became a popular vacation spot.

Surrounding the lake are resorts, motels, cabins, house-keeping cottages, inns, bars, night clubs and restaurants. PP&L operates four campgrounds on the shore of the lake and several other campgrounds are located nearby.

The lake contains 70 billion gallons of water and is used to generate power during peak demand periods or when other generating systems fail. But the primary use of the lake is for recreation.

More than 3,000 boats are moored on the lake and fishing is reported good in the many quiet coves that make the shoreline 52 miles long. Four islands, reachable only by boat, have picnic grounds.

Since 1962, more than 11 million fish have been stocked by private fishing clubs and by the Pennsylvania Fish Commission, according to David A. Boeshore, Lake Wallenpaupack Association executive director.

The lake was stocked with 24 inch muskellunge two years ago and the fish, required by law to be 30 inches long before caught, will be ready this summer, Boeshore said.

During the winter, the lake freezes over and the ice at times gets three feet thick. Ice boat races are held in January. Most of the recreational activities take place in the summer.

The Lake Wallenpaupack Yacht Club holds sailboat races on weekends in July. No motor boat races are planned now but some may be scheduled later in the summer, Boeshore said.

The campgrounds at the lake are designed to handle any type of equipment. Only electric hookups are available but they do have dumping stations and community water taps. No pets are permitted at the PP&L campgrounds but some of the other nearby campgrounds will accept pets.

The PP&L sites cost $3.25 per night and are available first-come-first-serve only unless reserved for one week or more. Groceries, firewood, ice and boat launching are available at the campgrounds.

Near the lake superintendent's office on the eastern shore is a visitor's center. Open 8:30 to 4:30, the center has a display of photographs explaining the history and purpose of the lake project.

The lake is close enough to Stroudsburg to be a good destination for a day-long outing.

An information center is operated by the Lake Wallenpaupack Association on Rte. 6 just north of the intersection with Rte. 507. No reservations are made there, but lists of available accommodations are kept.

Boating safety stressed

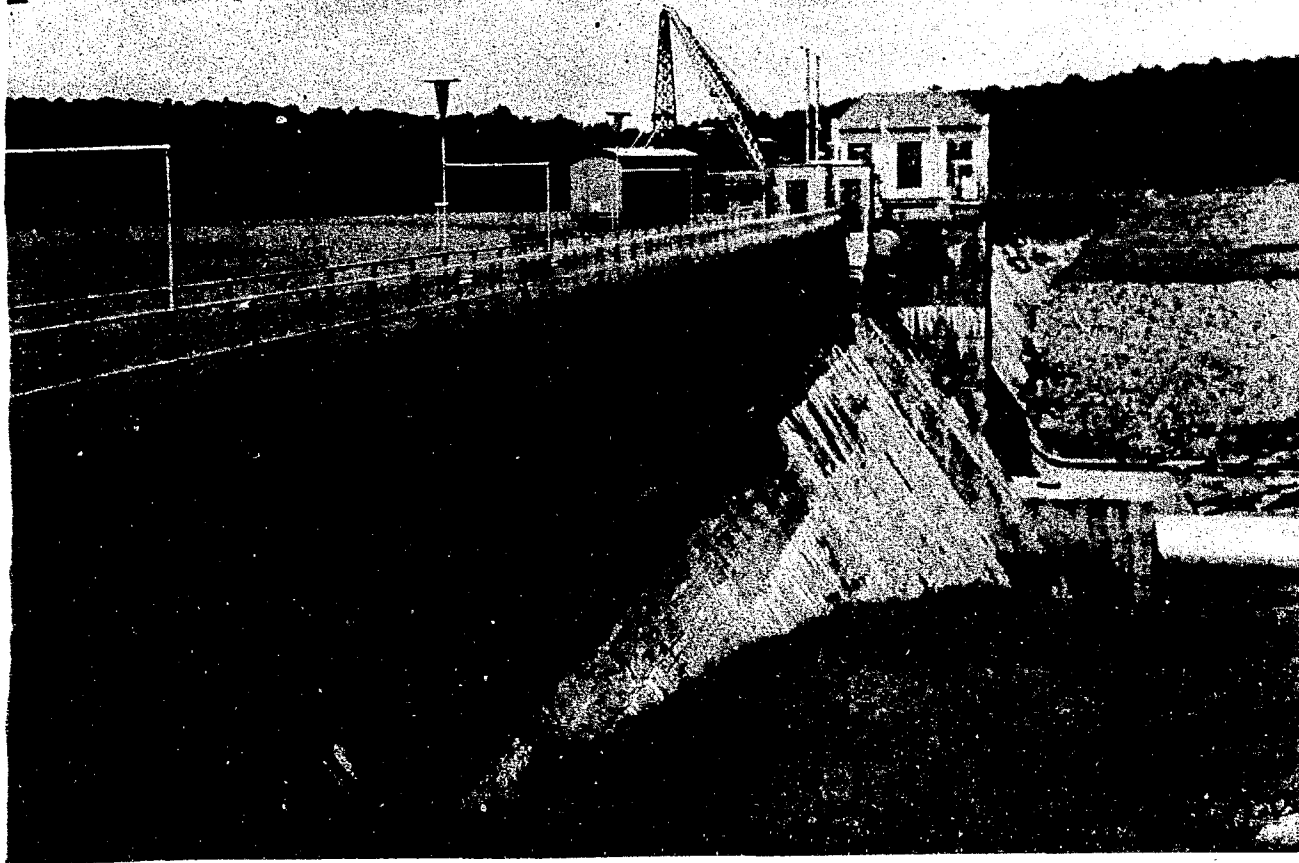

HARRISBURG — With the start of a new season for pleasure boating, Gov. Milton J. Shapp has proclaimed the week of June 29-July 5 as "Pennsylvania Safe Boating Week."

In issuing the proclamation at Harrisburg, the governor said, "Pennsylvania's boating program is recognized nationally for its excellence, but despite our successes, our achievements are occasionally marred by tragedy."

The Fish Commission's watercraft safety officers emphasize that despite an 18 per cent drop in boating fatalities last year, the safety record posted by boaters during the first five months of this year is cause for concern.

Capt. Charles E. Leising, director of the Fish Commission's Bureau of Waterways and State Boating Law Administrator, said "every boater should be prepared for the worst so he can quickly and safely react to unexpected situations which often occur in operating or riding in pleasure boats."

Present laws and regulations require all types of boats, including non-powered craft such as canoes, sail boats, kayaks, rubber rafts, etc., must carry a PFD for every person aboard

Kerr comedy opens Tanglwood

TAFTON — Opening the Tanglwood Dinner Theatre's third season will be Jean Kerr's most recent hit, "Finishing Touches."

Jean Kerr, the former Miss Jean Collins of Scranton, is well-known for her plays, "Please Don't Eat the Daisies," "Poor Richard" and "Mary, Mary," a play that was a huge success at the Dinner Theatre last summer.

"Finishing Touches," a comedy, surrounds a wild and lively family with three sons, girlfriends, neighbors and the romantic fantasies of a college professor involving a student of his — a failing student. Fast-paced and brimming with humor, the play remains a touching portrayal of love and marriage.

Margaret Gwenver, a familiar face to Tanglwood audiences, will play the leading role. During the past two years, Margaret has appeared in the Dinner Theatre productions of "Any Wednesday" as "Dorothy," "Private Lives" as "Amanda," "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" as "Jeanette," "The Paisley Convertible" as the memorable "Dirty Mom," "Butterflies Are Free" as "Mrs. Baker" as well as "Mary" in Jean Kerr's "Mary, Mary" and many more.

Since last summer, Margaret has been busy working on New York's Off- and Off-Off-Broadway and has appeared regularly as "Dr.

Keller" on CBS-TV's "The Guiding Light."

Also appearing in "Finishing Touches" will be Raymond Thorne, a newcomer to Tanglwood. An actor of extensive musical, comic and dramatic credits, Raymond has appeared in "Applause" with Lauren Bacall, in "Never Too Late" with Imogene Coca, in "Dames At Sea," "Angel Street," and "That Championship Season" with Marjorie Lord, Pat Carroll and Rosemary Prinz.

Thorne will be recognized as the former Pete Denton of CBS-TV's "Love of Life."

George Hall, "Snoopy" in Tanglwood's production of "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown," will be returning to appear throughout the season at Tanglwood.

In this year alone, George has played in Broadway's "We Interrupt This Program," on Off- and Off-Off-Broadway (twice with Margaret Gwenver), as well as appearing regularly on day-time TV's "The Edge of Night."

George will be recognized as "John," the Whitney butler on the CBS-TV show.

In the past, George has appeared in his night-club act at the Village Vanguard, Rubin Bleu, and Upstairs at the Downstairs. Broadway has seen him in "The Boy Friend," "Lend an Ear," and "There's a Girl in My Soup." He toured in the comedy "My Daughter is Rated X" with Paul Lynde. He will be appearing in Tanglwood's "Finishing Touches," "The Marriage-Go-Round," and "Relatively Speaking."

The cast of "Finishing Touches" will also include an area youngster, Jimmy Murphy, age 13.

TV's Pat Carroll to star in Pocono Playhouse opener

MOUNTAINHOME — The 20th season of The Rowena Stevens Pocono Playhouse gets off to a gala and rollicking start Tuesday with TV star Pat Carroll presiding over the antics in the new madcap musical comedy whodunit, "Something's Afoot."

This will play the Mountainhome summer theatre for two weeks, through July 5.

With book, music and lyrics by James McDonald, David Vos and Robert Gerlach, "Something's Afoot" is directed by theatre luminary Tony Tanner, who staged the brilliantly comic and "rave" productions of this show in Washington, D.C., Los Angeles and San Francisco. This production is headed for a Broadway opening in the fall.

Bursting with good cheer, and pure fun from start to finish (by all means bring the kids!), "Something's Afoot's" creators make a generous bow in the direction of super-best-selling novelist Agatha Christie and one of her greatest successes, "Ten Little Indians."

On stage, one of the most ingenious sets ever designed will aid and abet the high-jinks in store for the cast of 10, who have arrived as guests at a country house for a weekend party. Into this scene comes the redoubtable Miss Tweed, amateur detective par excellence, none other than Miss Carroll.

Hint: The butler didn't do it. But, for the enjoyment of future audiences, patrons are asked please not to reveal the ending, which promises to out-Agatha Agatha.

Pat Carroll comes to the Poconos on the heels of a record-breaking run in a tour of the sensational Broadway musical revival, "Irene," as the Irish Mrs. O'Dare. Her turnabout versatility has made her a big favorite with audiences on the living room screen since her appearances on the "Red Buttons Show," "Sid Caesar Hour" (for which she won an Emmy), a three-year regular on the "Danny Thomas Show," to say nothing of variety or series appearances with every top comic — Danny Kaye, Red Skelton, Buddy Hackett, Mickelton, and Jimmy Durante.

Big Pocono's big view — with moderate clarity, Delaware Water Gap is visible

Big Pocono — you can see it all

TANNERSVILLE — Probably the most spectacular scenic views in the Poconos can be seen from Big Pocono State Park — and it's not even necessary to get out of the car.

Big Pocono is a camelback shaped mountain with an elevation of 2,131 feet above sea level. The 1,300-acre park has picnic areas, hiking and horseback riding trails, drinking water and toilet facilities, a gift shop and refreshment concession, a fire tower and a small wildlife museum.

The park, built in 1953, is a good place to go with a lunch, binoculars and a camera. The thing that makes the lookout so impressive is the fact that you can see for miles in every direction.

On an extremely clear day, which only happens a few times each year, it is possible to see the Catskill Mountains in

New York with the unaided eye.

Most of the time, good views are possible of the Delaware Water Gap and Wind Gap, the Stroudsburgs, numerous local farms, lakes, forested hills and Interstate Rte. 80.

The park adjoins state game lands and the Camelback Ski Area. There are more than ten miles of trails. Many visitors walk from the top of the mountain down to the Baggy Pants bar and Rte. 80 near Tannersville, a distance of four miles.

The picnic areas at the top are shaded. They have tables, fireplaces and benches. No camping is permitted in the park, which is open for day use only.

There is a fire tower manned seasonally that visitors can climb to get an even better view of the area. A bumpy road leads to the park from exit 45 off Rte. 80 at Tannersville.

It follows Sullivan's Trail and passes a mammoth tree once nominated the largest American Linden tree in the United States. The tree has a twenty foot circumference at the ground and is five feet, two inches in diameter.

Sometimes known as big basswood, the tree is estimated to be more than 300 years old so it stood in the forest when William Penn arrived at his colony to name Penn's Woods.

It stands 105 feet high and its huge arms spread 75 feet. Marked by a plaque erected in May 1955 by the Pocono Garden Club, the tree had one of its young limbs sliced and bent by troops forging a trail to be followed by Gen. John Sullivan with an army of 2,000 men and 2,500 pack horses with supplies in 1779.

After being saved one time from a highway construction crew, the tree lost its top and some of its great spreading arms in Hurricane Hazel several years ago. Though damaged, it still gets blossoms and small hard nuts.

"The tree isn't going to last very much longer. It's cracking on the south side," said Esther Motts, park foreman at Big Pocono.

Further past the tree, the road passes Camelback before beginning a steep climb to the top of the mountain. At the summit, Motts operates the wildlife museum which contains about 300 specimens of stuffed animals, all from the Poconos.

The display of birds, animals and snakes is arranged to simulate the natural habitat of the creatures, woods, grasses and stones. The wildlife was killed along local highways and brought to Motts by members of the game commission, forestry office and state police.

The collection, unplanned, grew gradually over the last seven or eight years, Motts said.

"It wasn't a planned thing. It just grew," Motts said. "I wouldn't mount anything deliberately killed," she said, explaining, "I don't have a complete collection because I won't collect anything deliberately killed."

The museum is open weekdays, 8 a.m. to 3:45 p.m., or by request. Motts gives wildlife lectures to groups.

Outside the small old stone building that houses the museum, the scenery is beautiful now but the park usually has few visitors. On autumn weekends, the situation is different.

"During the fall foliage, we have to turn people away," Motts said.

Sailplane ride nearest thing to pure flight there is

By AMY TALLIA
Special Writer

At four thousand feet and climbing, the wind hissed around the thin fiberglass shell of our sailplane. The sky was blue, but hazy. Beneath us spread Appalachian ridges.

A downdraft suddenly dipped us a few hundred feet and my

The 59-year-old aviator was explaining the engine-less craft's flying principle.

"You search out thermal (hot air) columns and follow them up until they disappear.

Then you get out of the way of the downdrafts quick as you can, and find another thermal to climb."

This slow circling, dipping and rising, powered solely by air currents is as close to the natural act of flying as is humanly possible.

"It's the same thing a turkey buzzard does," I said.

"Mhmm," answered Henry, "or a hawk."

Man's desire to fly has been with us since Daedalus took the plunge with feathers glued to his arms and the Wright Brothers sailed over Kitty Hawk bluff. For those similarly fascinated by flight today, Tocks Island Soaring, Inc. at Blairstown airport offers a thrilling opportunity for glider instruction and glider scenic rides.

The company is headed by Henry Scarborough, licensed power and sail plane pilot. Scarborough became interested in flying while working for International Telephone and Telegraph's research and development department, where he designed aerial navigation equipment. Henry began his sailplane operation at Blairstown two years ago.

"Sailplaning is actually pretty simple," said Henry, "A person can legally solo a glider at fourteen and can hold a glider license at sixteen."

Scarborough's students are a mixed group — young, middle-aged, male, female. With Henry, flying is also a family affair. His daughter Allyn Marie is a glider pilot, and recently on their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary, his wife Mayra made her first solo flight.

To begin a sailplane flight, a single engine power plane is attached to the glider by a quarter inch gauge polyethylene cord.

The powered airplane moves down the runway and takes off with the glider in tow.

Weather conditions are not too great a problem for gliders.

"It's a year 'round sport," said Scarborough. "Spring and fall are best if you want height and distance. Summer is best for pure enjoyment."

Specially equipped gliders have been flown as high as 50,000 feet. Henry once flew a sailplane at 31,000 feet over the Grand Canyon.

However, at Blairstown most flights stay in the 5,000-10,000-foot category at speeds from 60 to 120 miles per hour.

Although gliders have been in use since the earliest days of airplanes, (the Wright Brothers flew a glider), they have functioned mainly as a sport or hobby. The only practical use of a glider was a World War II attempt to use them as transport crafts.

A single power plane would tow two huge gliders filled with troops and equipment. The venture failed because the out-sized gliders were cumbersome, awkward, and were almost impossible to fly at night.

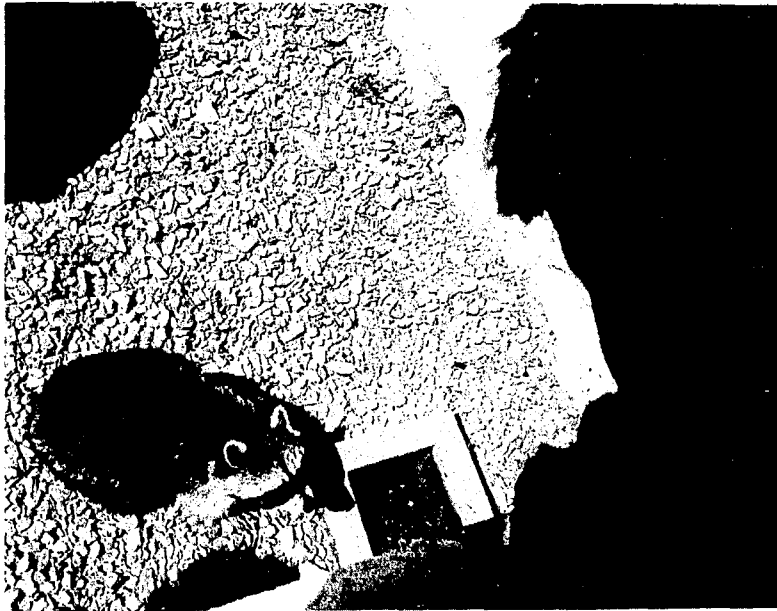

Sailplaning has enjoyed a recent rise in popularity both in the United States and Europe. Clubs have sprung up in many areas. Blairstown Airport has two clubs in addition to Scarborough's instruction and scenic flight operation.

But because of its high cost, the sport is not for everyone. The average price of a glider is 10 thousand dollars. Membership in a club cuts the cost of buying a private plane, but four hundred dollars entrance fees, plus dues (about one hundred and forty dollars), added to the cost of lessons.

(at least another four hundred dollars by the time you are licensed), sums up to quite an expense!

Blue Mountain Camp — fun, games and philosophy

By JOE RATTMAN

Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Brushy Mountain was a wilderness area when Morris and Bertha Escoll drove with a real estate agent up a road "all ruts and mud," now Rte. 447, in 1923. The young camp managers were looking for land to start their own camp at a time when a few camps scattered throughout the Northeast comprised the whole young camp industry in America.

Much of the land was swampy and a small lake on the property was littered with tree stumps. The shore around the lake was mucky but a virgin stand of evergreen trees stood on much of the land that had not been cleared for farming.

"Although the lake was a mass of stumps the surroundings were very beautiful," Mrs. Escoll recalled. She took her husband aside and whispered to him that the property was the one that they were looking for. Morris borrowed money from his sister and obtained a mortgage from a local bank.

Local farmers doubted the wisdom of trying to transform the marshland into a beautiful mountain retreat. They warned that horse's hoofs would get caught in the mire and that oxen would be needed for the job of scooping away the muck and pulling the stumps out with aid of a wench and pulley.

Escoll followed the advice, also using horses with a lumber wagon to haul away the brush, creating a 40-acre lake, and building athletic playing fields besides buildings with bunks for the children. The property overlooked the Stroudsburgs and the blue tinted mountains forming the Delaware Water Gap beyond so what was once the Monroe County Fishing Club was renamed Blue Mountain Camp.

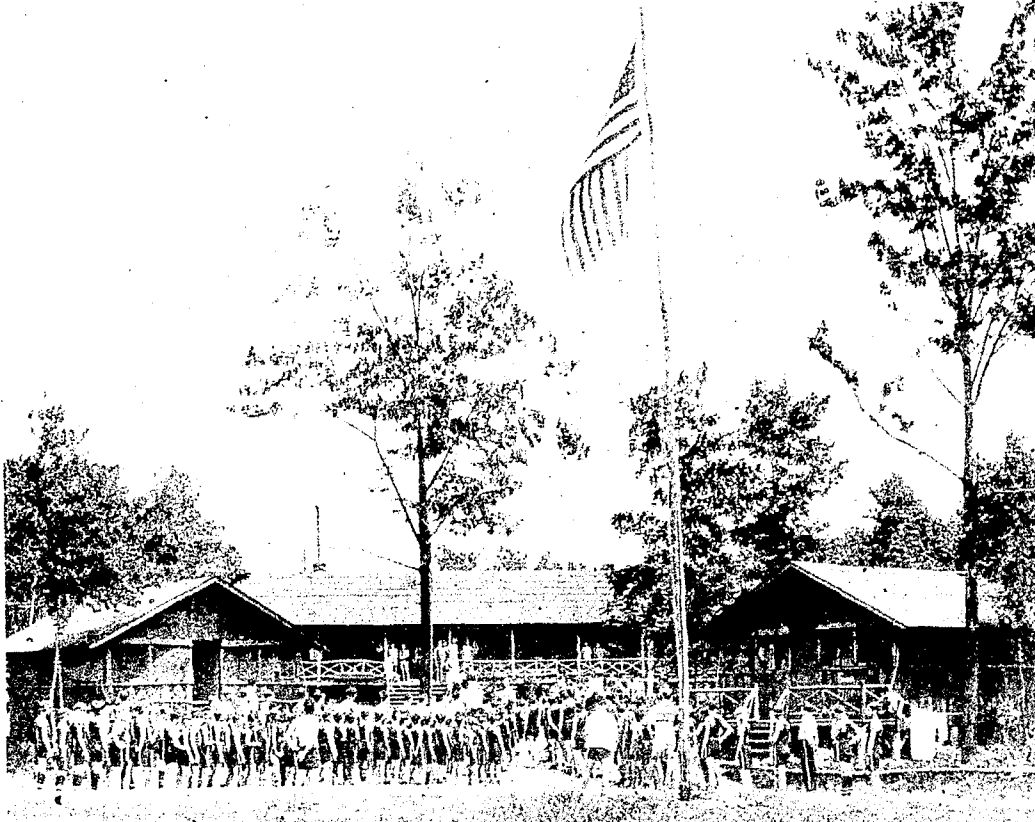

While both teaching school in Doylestown, the Escolls heard of the early New England camps founded around the turn of the century. They immediately stirred our imagination," Morris wrote years later.

They watched newspaper ads and were interviewed by camp owners seeking camp counselors and directors. After turning down camp job offers in Maine and New York, they finally found what they wanted.

"We saw an ad in the New York Times," Bertha said. It offered for rent a run down camp in the eastern Poconos. Realizing their opportunity, they rented the small boy's camp, known as Blue Ridge camp (and located on the site of what is now Blue Ridge Family Resort), and began a 41-year career in the business.

Blue Ridge Camp was very small, the children lived in tents that sometimes blew down and illnesses were frequent among the children. Some caught pneumonia and had to be taken to the small hospital in East Stroudsburg.

camp for girls. That is what motivated them to look at real estate and buy the Brushy Mountain property. Mrs. Escoll could not recall any other camps in the Poconos at the time they were involved with the two "Blue" camps.

Getting Blue Mountain Camp started was difficult. The Escolls traveled to the Philadelphia area, where they solicited friends and relatives to send their children for the two month season. They went to the homes of people recommended by their friends and got reservations for 90 girls the first year, more than they expected.

"The first year, we had our own generator," Mrs. Escoll said. "There were no phones and no electricity. We had to dig wells for water."

Once the new camp was started, the Escolls gave up the Blue Ridge camp. They bought more land adjacent to their new camp to enable them to construct a boy's camp on the opposite side of the lake. A week before the new camp was to open, a well digger told the Escolls that the deep well he dug yielded no water.

"That was a dramatic moment: We found that we did not have water the week before the children came," Mrs. Escoll said. Escoll appeared before the East Stroudsburg Borough Council, which agreed to let him pump water from the town reservoir located down the mountainside. Laborers worked until dark each night laying pipe and the line was finished three days before the children were to arrive July 1.

New facilities were slowly added each year. The children came by train from Philadelphia and gradually others came from other cities. Parents could come to visit at any time and they boarded at nearby farm houses.

"In the early days after it first started it grew rapidly. We had to keep adding bunks," Mrs. Escoll said. "Of course, we helped the banks a lot because we borrowed all of our money from them at a very high interest."

Morris Escoll, who graduated with a degree in forestry from Cornell in 1916, planted hundreds of seedlings of white and red pine, spruce, and European larch on the camp grounds. He developed nature trails that would become a central feature of his camp program.

Providing urban children with the chance to explore the wonders of life in the fields, streams and woodlands surrounding the camp was seen as very important by Escoll. He agreed with a statement by Charles Elliot, president of Harvard for the last third of the 19th century, that "summer camp is the greatest step in education that America has given the world."

Escoll developed a philosophy about camp that he explained in a book published two weeks before his death in 1971. He wrote the book during the years after he sold the camp a decade earlier. Doctors advised him to get out of the camp business when he suffered a heart attack and he reluctantly complied.

The book attempted to synthesize several ideas that Escoll acquired from over 40 years of experience in the camp business and living in a rapidly developing technological society. Escoll served in World War I in France and he shared a belief with President Woodrow Wilson that it was "The War to End All Wars."

Resident camps, Escoll argued, have more profound impact and influence, both physical and psychological, on a child's development than do the public schools. Thus, all children should have the opportunity for this necessary intellectual, physical and emotional development. His book, "War Camps or Peace Camps," made several points:

— The federal government should subsidize resident camps for all children and that the money should be pared from the defense budget.

— A small minority of children get to have lengthy camp stays and most have no camp experience at all or at most a "week or two at some philanthropic camp."

— Some camps are still limited to children of certain ethnic, economic or religious backgrounds but all children should have the benefit of a good resident camp "as a matter of right."

— Camps can show the way to better race relations and better human relations.

— By taking money from the military budget, "This money would be spent not for the destruction of tens of thousands of lives or of millions of homes and farms, but would be an investment in building up the lives, the skills, the hopes of our children — an investment in the future of our country, in our real national security."

Escoll wrote that he expected critics to dismiss his proposal for integrating camping with the traditional educational experience as "utopian" and he responded by attempting to draw a historical parallel with the beginnings of public education, which encountered resistance at first but prevailed in extending education beyond the children of just the wealthy.

"My father was a very peaceful person and that is why he was a very strong camp person," his daughter, Martha Lubeck, said. "He felt that all efforts and money could be developed so much more for children than for war."

After years of success at Blue Mountains Camps, Escoll bought Shawnee Lake Camp. In 1949, he offered to turn it over to a Philadelphia Quaker group to be used as a "summer camp combined with an all-year peace institute." The American Friends group was not organized to handle out of town property, according to Escoll, so they declined the offer. The quest for peace and the development of children were somehow always linked in Escoll's mind.

"Above all, children will help us to regain our appreciation for human life," restoring "a conviction that life is sacred" and accomplishing this through "their own spontaneous love of life, a love which finds its best expression during a stay at a good summer camp," Escoll wrote.

Children grew up attending Escoll's camp, some returning in later years to work as counselors. Escoll put together a manual of instruction for counselors and it can be summarized by a motto that he took from French author Joseph Joubert: "Children have more need of models than of critics." He opposed regimentation, imposing uniformity and efforts of some counselors to stimulate children to compete against other individual children in sports. Some counselors did not think that Escoll was strict enough or that the children were sufficiently disciplined.

A varied program was set up for the children. It lasted from 7 a.m. to 8 at night, giving the children a choice of activities including woodworking, basketry, pottery making, nature walks, dramatics, music, dancing, photography and the usual land and water sports. Before lunch, time was reserved for writing daily letters to parents.

"We were one of the best equipped camps in the country, had the best program, and had an international reputation," Mrs. Escoll said. Some of the counselors and other employees at Blue Mountain over the years left to start their own camps.

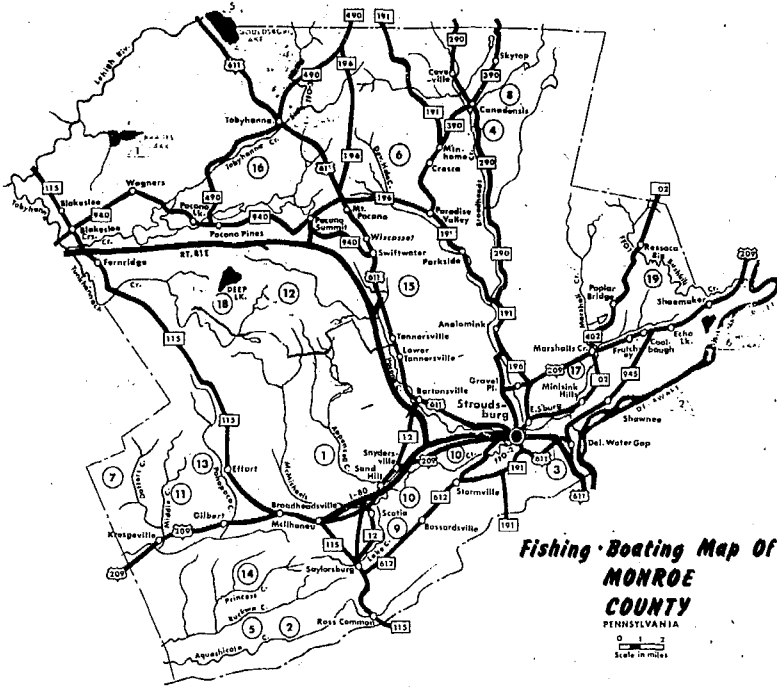

"They called my father the dean of camping," Martha Lubeck said. "By the time my parents sold the camp, they had third generation campers coming," she said. In the final seasons, more than 100 of the 350 summer campers at Blue Mountain had parents whose childhood experiences included a stay there. Mrs. Escoll saw all of it as she managed the camp with her husband.

"I really helped in every angle of it," she said. "Sometimes, I would be so tired at the end of the day that I would go to sleep in all my clothes — and raised five children at the same time."

Girls had their activities, too (1933)

ABOUT AN EPICUREAN SAFARI...

Dining at "Selecta," 6 miles south of Stroudsburg, is like going to a private party abroad. The yellow sign on Rt. 191 reads only: "SELECTA (215) 588-1042 Rijsttafel." A shale driveway leads through woods to a field-stone mansion, the parking lot studded with out-of-state cars.

The host, a spice-importer from Java, introduces the gourmets in the oak-beamed Rattan Bar. Except for stubborn martini-drinkers, most enjoy the "Selecta," exotic-blue House Specialty. The restaurant features an authentic Indonesian Rice-Table buffet on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings by reservation only. Other cuisine may be ordered ahead. Private parties of 8 or more on other days. Phone for mailing of information/menu card.

'Finishing Touches' to put first touch to Tanglwood

TAFTON — The Tanglwood Dinner Theatre has announced a change in schedule: Jean Kerr's "Finishing Touches" will open the third season instead of Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite" as previously announced.

Actor Louis Criscuolo, who was to have appeared in "Plaza Suite" has run into a problem in scheduling the time to come to the Pocono dinner theatre. He has been appearing in an off-Broadway production in New York City. Due to the success of the show, its run has been extended through the summer.

Criscuolo will be remaining in New York to stay with the show. The show, playing at the American Place Theatre, consists of two one-act plays: "Yanks 3, Detroit 0, Top of the Seventh" and "Rubbers." Alan Arkin directed the production.

Also known to CBS-TV audiences as "Danny," the waiter at the New Moon Cafe on "The Edge of Night," Criscuolo appeared as "Barney Cashman" in "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" at the Tanglwood Dinner Theatre last summer.

"Finishing Touches" is to be followed by four funny and ever popular plays during the summer at Tanglwood:

— "The Owl and the Pussycat" by Bill Manhoff, July 8 through 13 and July 15 through 20.

— "The Marriage-Go-Round" by Leslie Stevens. July

— "Relatively Speaking" by Alan Ayckbourn, Aug. 5 through 10 and Aug. 12 through 17.

— "A Thousand Clowns" by Herb Gardner, Aug. 19 through 24 and Aug. 26 through 31.

All the productions except "Finishing Touches" will run for two weeks this summer. Last summer, the dinner theatre experimented with running its shows for two weeks. It found that there was more than enough demand in the area to fill its house.

Much of the acting talent the dinner theatre has brought to the Poconos will be returning this season. Margaret Gwenver, a favorite of Tanglwood audiences, will be returning in the opening production as well as Vicki Sokol and JoAnne Sedwick. Raymond

Ulcer cause

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A study reported by Blue Cross of Northern California links smoking to ulcers. Twelve per cent of the male smokers among the 37,000 adults studied over four years had ulcer problems, compared with fewer than six per cent of the non-smokers. Women had fewer ulcers than men, the study said. Only six per cent of female smokers suffered from some type of ulcer, compared to four per cent of the non-smokers.

Baker, Charles Bartlett and John Washbrook will be appearing in later productions. New faces to come to Tanglwood include James Widdows and Patricia Richardson.

The dinner theatre, produced and founded by John Sedwick, director of the Emmy Award winning daytime TV program "The Edge of Night," has produced some 16 plays during the last two summer seasons. Sedwick will be directing the first two shows this season, "Finishing Touches" and "The Owl and the Pussycat," as is his habit while he "vacations" from television. Directors of past productions at Tanglwood, Russell Treyz and Charles Maryan will return to direct again this season.

The Tanglwood Dinner Theatre is a professional Equity dinner theatre, the first of its kind in the area. It maintains a resident company of professional actors throughout the summer.

The dinner theatre is located in Tafton, on Route 390, three miles north of I-84 or one mile south of Route 507, near Lake Wallenpaupack. Performances are held nightly except Monday. Dinner is served between 6 and 7:30. Curtain time is 8:40. Ticket prices include dinner and performance and are $11 and $13, depending upon seat location. On Saturday evenings, prices are $12 and $14. For further information, and reservations call (717) 226-9444 between 1 and 8 p.m.
